INDIANA STATE NORMAL SCHOOL.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

The act of the General Assembly which created the State Normal School was approved December 20, 1865. This act defined the object of the school to be "the preparation of teachers for teaching in the common schools of Indiana," provided for the appointment of a board of trustees, the location of the buildings, the organization of a training school and the adoption of courses of study and created the Normal School fund for the maintenance of the institution. The act further required the trustees to locate the school at the town or city of the State that should obligate itself to give the largest amount in cash or buildings and grounds to secure the school. The city of Terre Haute was the only place to offer any inducements to secure the institution. A tract of land three hundred feet square near the center of the city, valued at $25,000, and $50,000 in cash were offered, and the city agreed to maintain forever one-half the necessary expense of keeping the buildings and grounds in repair. This liberal offer was accepted, and the construction of the building was begun. Aided by subsequent appropriations, the trustees were able to complete certain portions of the building, and the school was opened January 6, 1870. The professional training of teachers was an experiment in Indiana, and the institution began its work without the confidence and united support of the people of the State.

Twenty-three students were present on the opening day and this number increased to forty by the end of the term. The attendance has grown steadily since the opening of the school, and during the year ending June 26, 1903, 1,316 different students were enrolled. In 1887 the school had become so large that it was necessary for the high school of Terre Haute, which had occupied a portion of the building since its completion, to find new quarters, thus leaving the entire building of three stories to be occupied by the Normal School alone.

On the forenoon of April 9, 1888, the building and its contents were almost totally destroyed by fire. Only the foundations were left unimpaired; the library, furniture, apparatus and everything in the building—the accumulation of eighteen years—were consumed. Terre Haute provided temporary quarters for the school, and, under the contract to maintain one-half the expense of repairs to the buildings and grounds, promptly gave $50,000 in cash with which to begin the work of rebuilding. The next General Assembly appropriated $100,000 for the completion of the building and the purchase of a new library, etc. With these sums the school constructed a commodious and beautiful building, and purchased an equipment for every department much superior to that possessed before the fire.

The Legislature of 1893 appropriated $40,000 for the construction of a new building to be used for gymnasias, library and laboratories. The General Assembly of 1895 appropriated $20,000 and the General Assembly of two years later $10,000 with which to complete this building.

MATERIAL EQUIPMENT.

The State Normal School occupies two large, handsome buildings, each four stories high. The larger building, constructed immediately after the fire of 1888, is about 190x150 feet, and is a very commodious, well-appointed school building. It contains an assembly room capable of seating three hundred persons, a beautiful chapel which seats comfortably one thousand persons, the president's office, reception room, cloak rooms, class rooms, wash rooms, etc. It is, architecturally, one of the most beautiful buildings in the State, and its internal arrangement is well adapted to the purpose for which it was constructed.

The second building is about 100x100 feet, and is, architecturally, in general harmony with the larger building. The basement story contains the two gymnasias; the second story is occupied by the library. This is a large, well-lighted, beautiful room, admirably adapted to library use. The third story is occupied by the several science departments. The fourth story is used by the literary societies and the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. The library is equipped with every needed appliance, and contains about 35,000 well-selected volumes. The chemical, biological and physical laboratories on the third floor are substantially finished and are equipped with everything needed for the science work of the school.

Probably there are few, if any, normal schools in the United States that are more fully equipped in all their departments for work than is this institution.

PROPOSED ENLARGEMENT.

The General Assembly of 1903 made very liberal provision for an increased support of the school. A specific appropriation of $50,000 was made for the construction of a training school building, and a very substantial advance in the institution's annual maintenance was given by increasing the tax for the support of the school.

For many years the school has felt greatly hampered by the presence in its main building of the large training schools which it is necessary to maintain. These schools have occupied portions of the building very much needed for the other work of the school. In addition to this fact, it has been impossible to provide room enough for maintaining the training school on a scale commensurate with the important work that it is intended to do in the preparation of teachers. It is the intention to purchase a suitable site near the present buildings and erect thereon a modern building complete in all of its details, to be used as a training school building. Every effort will be made to construct a model building that shall afford every facility for the work of the training school. The training school itself will then be enlarged so that each of the eight grades below the high school will have a large, well-lighted, well-ventilated room complete in all of its appointments. Heretofore it has been necessary to have more than one grade in each of several of these rooms. With the new building contemplated, each grade will be to itself in a separate room and managed by a single teacher. A portion of the new training school building will be set apart for elementary manual training work. The $50,000 appropriated by the General Assembly will be supplemented by about $25,000 taken from the general funds of the institution, in order that the training school building may be in every respect a modern, model and complete school building.

The increase in the tax for the support of the school will give the institution, beginning July 1, 1904, about $100,000 annually for its maintenance. This will enable the school to enlarge many of its courses and provide additional teachers. It is the intention to offer courses in the various advanced subjects that will equip teachers in every way for teaching the most advanced high school subjects.

THE PURPOSE OF THE SCHOOL.

The statute of 1865 which created the Indiana State Normal School clearly defined its object. This was declared to be "the preparation of teachers for teaching in the common schools of Indiana." The State Normal School, then, is not an institution for general culture for its own sake; it is a special school—a professional school. Its sole purpose is to confer on its students that education, discipline, professional training and practical skill which will best fit them for teaching in the public schools of Indiana. The school limits its attention and work to this one thing—the preparation of teachers for teaching in the common schools of Indiana. No person is admitted who does not enter for the purpose of preparing to teach in the common schools of the State, and all the work of the school has this one end in view. Perhaps a brief statement of the school's work in its attempt to fulfill this one object of its existence may aid some to determine whether or not they wish to become students.

Since the common schools of the State consist largely of the district and grade schools and the greater part of the common school work is in the elementary or common branches, the State Normal School seeks first of all to ground its students (such as do not already possess this knowledge) thoroughly in the common or legal branches of study. These lie at the foundation of all learning and scholarship. They are indeed the "fundamental branches of learning." It is also true that the great majority of pupils in the public schools do not advance beyond these elementary subjects. If the State's system of common schools is to become what its founders designed it to be, it must be largely through the efficient teaching of these elementary branches. About one year of the Normal School course is devoted to a thorough, reflective study of these. They are not pursued and taught as in a common elementary school. The student is required to possess the usual general knowledge of these subjects to be admitted. In the Normal School he is led to make a more critical and philosophical investigation of the facts and subject-matter than he has hitherto done. He now studies these subjects from a professional point of view, from a teacher's standpoint. His own method of studying them, and the method of presenting them appropriate to the different grades of the public schools, are themselves objects of attention and study. The whole presentation of the subject is surrounded by a pedagogical atmosphere which is altogether absent from the ordinary school. The student is not only acquiring a larger and better knowledge of the subjects themselves, but he is learning to teach them. All persons are required to pursue the common school branches before graduating except college graduates and persons holding three years', sixty months', professional or life State licenses.

In the next place the course in the Normal School requires every student to pursue a long line of more strictly professional work—that is, work which is designed to give special insight into all educational questions and to prepare the individual for intelligent and reasonable charge of a school. This line of study consists of educational psychology, experimental psychology, theory of the school, the principles of methods, observation in the training schools and the interpretation of the teaching observed, child-study, history of education, school supervision, school systems of Europe and America, science of education, and practice in the training schools. In this more strictly professional department of the student's work every phase of education receives extended, thorough and systematic treatment—the historical, the theoretical and the practical. The whole object of this is to lead the student to acquire a knowledge of the principles of education and to acquire a reasonable degree of skill in applying these as a teacher. He is to be freed from obedience to mere prescription and rule as a teacher and acquire genuine originality and true individuality. Rational understanding of his vocation is aimed at and the power to determine from the standpoint of principle what the process and work of the school should be.

In the third place, the school requires its students to pursue such advanced lines and courses of study as will best reinforce the knowledge of the common school branches, and at the same time best prepare them for the more advanced grades of public school work. Courses in Latin, German, History, Mathematics, Literature, Science, etc., are offered, and no student can graduate who does not in addition to his study of the common branches and the professional line, pursue a sufficient number of these to complete four years' work in the school. Like the common school subjects, these branches are studied constantly from the teacher's point of view, and the student is frequently led to reflect upon their value as means of education, the method by which they are being studied, methods of teaching these appropriate to the grades in which they are studied, etc. The object is to make the entire work of the school strongly and distinctively professional.

COURSES OF STUDY.

COURSES ARE OFFERED AS FOLLOWS:

Geography.....	One year.
Reading and Elementary Literature	Twenty-six weeks.
Arithmetic.....	Twenty-six weeks.
English Grammar	One year.
Penmanship.....	Thirteen weeks.
Vocal Music	Two years.
United States History and Civil Government.....	One year.
Physiology and Hygiene	Twenty-six weeks.
Drawing	Two years.
Chemistry.....	Two years.
Physics	Two years.
Algebra	One and one-third years.
Rhetoric and Composition.....	One year.
General History	Two years.
Geometry	One year.
Trigonometry	Thirteen weeks.
Analytic Geometry	Thirteen weeks.
Theory of Equations or Elements of Calculus.....	Thirteen weeks.
The History and Teaching of Mathematics....	Thirteen weeks.
Latin.....	Four years.
German.....	Three years.
Advanced Literature.....	Two years.
Zoology.....	Two years.
Botany	Two years.
Educational Psychology.....	One year.
Experimental Psychology and Child Study ...	One year.
School Supervision and School Systems of Europe and America.....	Twenty-six weeks.
History of Education	One year.
Observation and Practice in the Training
School.....	Twenty-six weeks.
Principles and Methods of Instruction.....	Twenty-six weeks.
Physical Culture.....	One year.

By one year is meant an academic year of thirty-nine weeks. Five hours per week are given to each subject pursued by the student.

EXPLANATION OF COURSES.

DIVISIONS OF YEAR.

The school year is divided into four terms, denoted respectively the fall, winter, spring and summer terms. The first three are each thirteen weeks long; the summer term is six weeks in length.

CREDITS.

The term "credit" is used to denote a term's successful work—thirteen weeks—in any subject.

COURSES LEADING TO GRADUATION.

The State Normal School maintains five courses of study, as follows: (1) A four years' course; (2) an abridgment of this course for graduates of commissioned high schools; (3) an abridgment of the same course for persons holding one or more three years' licenses; (4) an abridgment of this course for persons holding professional or sixty months' licenses, and (5) a course for college or university graduates and persons holding life licenses.

THE COURSE OF FOUR YEARS requires fifty credits for graduation. It is designed to meet the needs of those persons that enter the school having the minimum scholarship. The object of this course is to give as thorough and complete a preparation for common school teaching as can be conferred in the period named. The student of average ability, and who possesses a fair knowledge of the common school branches on entering, can make credits enough in four years to graduate. Four subjects carried successfully throughout the course, with first term music and penmanship each carried as a fifth study, give the required credits for graduation. The common school branches, one term's work in rhetoric and composition and at least nine terms' professional work are required. The remaining subjects necessary to graduation may be elected by the student, with the advice of the faculty. Many teachers of the class here described are persons of mature years and successful experience in teaching. Some of these attend the State Normal School for one or more years, not expecting to complete the course and graduate, but wishing to deepen their knowledge of the common school branches, broaden their scholarship by the study of some of the more advanced academic subjects and to gain a better understanding of the principles of teaching by a study of the strictly professional subjects of the course. It is not required that such students shall pursue the subjects in the exact order in which they appear in the list of courses. Reasonable variations from this order are permitted. When there seem good reasons for doing so, such students are permitted to defer the study of the common school branches in whole or part till a later stage of the course is reached.

THE COURSE FOR GRADUATES OF COMMISSIONED HIGH SCHOOLS is the same as the four years' course, except that such graduates are given a credit of one year—fourteen credits—and are thus enabled to graduate in three years. Such graduates are required to take the common school branches, one term of composition and rhetoric and at least nine terms' professional work. The remaining subjects may be elected by the student, with the advice of the faculty. Thirty-six credits are necessary to graduation in this course. High school graduates usually have only such knowledge of the common school branches as they have acquired at an early age and in the grades below the high school. For this reason they are required to spend one full year in a thorough, professional study of these branches in the Normal School course. It is not required that the common school branches be studied in the order in which they appear in the catalogue. This class of students are permitted to elect the order in which they shall pursue the subjects necessary for graduation. This credit of one year is given to graduates of commissioned high schools, not because they are supposed to have a teacher's professional knowledge of the subjects pursued in the high school, but on the ground that the high school course has conferred a general culture that fairly entitles them to this credit. The thirty-six credits necessary to graduation in this course must all be made by actual class work in the institution, or by thorough, extended examinations on the subject-matter required for each credit.

COURSE FOR HOLDERS OF THREE YEARS' LICENSES.—Persons holding one or more three years' county licenses are given fifteen credits, and are thus enabled to complete the course in three years. Thirty-five credits made in the school by actual class work or by thorough and extended examinations on the subject-matter required for the credits are necessary to graduation in this course. Of these, at least nine are required to be professional subjects, one in composition and rhetoric; the remaining twenty-five credits may be made in subjects elected by the student, with the advice of the faculty. Students of this class are permitted to elect the order in which they will pursue the subjects of the course.

COURSE FOR HOLDERS OF PROFESSIONAL OR SIXTY MONTHS' LICENSES.—Persons holding professional or sixty months' licenses are admitted without examination to the Junior Class. Twenty-five credits are necessary to graduation. Of these at least nine are required to be chosen from the professional subjects of the course; the other sixteen may be elected from the remaining professional and academic subjects of the course.

COURSE FOR COLLEGE GRADUATES AND HOLDERS OF LIFE STATE LICENSES.—The course of one year for college graduates has been organized to meet the needs of those graduates of colleges and universities who wish to enter the field of teaching and superintending schools, and who feel the need of professional training for this work. The instruction is of a strictly professional character. In planning this course it is assumed that the student has a liberal and accurate knowledge of the subjects required to be taught in the public graded and high schools. It is further assumed that this academic knowledge and training, important and necessary as it is, does not alone qualify him for the delicate and responsible work of teaching and managing schools. It is sought, therefore, to give the student that professional knowledge and skill that belong peculiarly to the teaching profession. Only such persons are eligible to this course as have graduated from some college or university maintaining a thorough college course of not less than four years. If the student so elects, three credits in the academic subjects may be substituted for three professional credits.

Persons holding a life State license to teach in Indiana are credited with three years on the course, and are thus enabled to graduate in one year. Such persons are required to take nine professional subjects of the course and are permitted to elect the subjects in which to make the remaining three credits required for graduation.

The courses of study are planned for students of average ability and attainments. Persons of greater ability and attainments can complete the course in less than four years; those of less ability and scholarship will need more than four years to graduate.

Many persons attend the State Normal School for a short time only, having no intention of completing the course and graduating. They wish to pursue such subjects in the course as will prepare them better to teach certain subjects and to carry on more efficiently the work they are required to do in the particular positions which they hold. Some of these are not graduates of commissioned high schools or higher institutions, and do not hold high grades of licenses, but they are often persons of mature years, good ability and successful experience in teaching. Such persons are allowed to elect the courses of study which they will pursue, provided their preparation and experience seem to indicate to the department or departments directly concerned that they can pursue advantageously the courses desired.

It is not necessary that the order in which the common school branches are laid down in the catalogue be strictly followed. So far as possible, students are permitted to pursue the common school branches in the order best adapted to their needs, provided only that the continuity in subjects shall not be broken.

Students entering on diplomas from non-commissioned high schools or licenses of lower grade than three years are permitted to elect one professional subject at the beginning of their course, if they desire.

Students entering upon three years' licenses or diplomas from commissioned high schools are strongly advised to begin the professional work in the first term, since the professional work includes not less than nine terms of work for graduation.

In the effort to adapt the work of the various courses as fully as possible to the individual needs of students, as large liberty is accorded in the selection of subjects and the order of pursuing the same as it seems possible to give while yet maintaining the integrity of the courses.

appeal to experience. Constant reference is had to the treatises on these subjects contained in the library, and one object is to give the student some acquaintance with the best standard authorities on the subject of education considered in its more reflective and philosophical aspects. Effort is made to free the student from dependence on mere authority and individual experiment in the school room, by leading him to a liberal knowledge and grasp of fundamental educational ideas. In the historical phases of the subject, effort is made to see the great educational epochs which the history of the race exhibits; also to make such study as is practicable of specific educational movements and reforms that possess permanent interest and value to the student and teacher. In this connection attention is paid to the systems of educational doctrine worked out by the world's greatest thinkers and writers on the subject.

FIRST TERM'S WORK.

General History of Education.

1. General view of the educational movement as a whole.
2. The distinction into Oriental, Classical and Christian education.
 - a. The basis of this distinction.
3. The further divisions and subdivisions under Oriental, Classical and Christian education.
 - a. The basis of these divisions.

SECOND TERM'S WORK.

The Leading School Systems of Europe and America.

1. Their present organization.
2. The development of the existing systems.
 - a. The influence of educational reforms upon this development.

THIRD TERM'S WORK.

1. The Schools of Indiana.

- a. The existing organization.
 - (1) The development of the present system.
 - (2) The school laws underlying the existing system.

2. The Science of Education.

- a. The central principle.
 - (1) The organization of education as determined by this principle.
- b. The relation of education as an art to education as a science.

As indicating somewhat the scope and character of the work of this department, the following subjects are mentioned as among those that receive attention:

- 1. Education considered (a) as an art, (b) as a science, (c) in its philosophical aspects.
- 2. The presupposition of education—an orderly, systematic (rational) world; a being essentially rational in nature.
- 3. Explanations of the existing world order—Atheistic; Pantheistic; Theistic, etc. Grounds of the theistic view.
- 4. Man's essential nature as a rational being. Man's place in nature.
- 5. Why man is the only being that can be educated.
- 6. Difference between special, professional or technical education, and liberal or general education and culture.
- 7. Nature, form and limits of the educating process.
- 8. Data of educational science.
- 9. Triple nature of the being to be educated.
- 10. Nature, aims and means of physical culture.
- 11. Intellectual education.
- 12. Culture of the ethical nature.

13. Religion and the school.
14. Relation of the school to other educational agencies.
15. Educational values.

W. W. PARSONS,
Head of Department.

PEDAGOGY.

Required Work.

The work of the department begins in the fourth term of the course and continues for nine terms; or for ten terms, in case the work in Observation is elected. The first four terms are devoted to a consideration of psychological phenomena in order to work out Educational Psychology as a basis for method in teaching. Students expecting to complete the work of the school in three years or less are strongly advised to enter upon the work in Psychology the first term of the school course, since it requires nine terms to complete the pedagogical course.

Psychology.

First Term.—At the beginning of the first term's work the attempt is made to discover, by the examination of particular mental states, the essential mark of psychological phenomena. On this basis the students attempt to think out (1) the scope of the subject, (2) the divisions, (3) their relative importance, (4) the modes of approach to the subject-matter, (5) the steps of mind in investigating psychological phenomena. The second topic of the term's work is the nature of educational psychology.

Second Term.—In this term the students are led to study the basis and the nature of feeling, and to consider the problem of training the emotions.

Growth of mind as Will is the second subject of the work in the second term. The nature of volition in its development from impulse to self-direction, including the growth of the systems of desires, the process of choice and the establishing of a basis for ethics, furnish the scope and trend of the second half of the term's work.

Third Term.—The third term investigates the nature of Knowing. This includes the conditions under which the presentation is created, the type of interpretation in each stage, and the steady growth from sense perception to intuition.

Supervision.

First Term.—The scope includes the development of educational ideals and processes from prehistoric times to 800 A. D. The attempt is made to determine a people's culture by finding out what the people accomplished in science, art and social life. The student is directed in his investigation of the best materials at hand and encouraged to make intelligent use of these sources. Special stress is placed upon the contributions which the Jews, the Greeks and the Romans made to the life of the race and upon the causes of the peculiar combination of these forces at the beginning of the ninth century.

Second Term.—The development of educational ideals and processes from 800 A. D. to the present time. An attempt is made to trace the rise of scholasticism; the origin and development of universities; the work of the great educators; the movement of the renaissance through all the art forms; the reformation; the counter-reformation; the rise of modern philosophy; and to show how out of these forces the new state came and made possible the modern school. Special stress is placed upon the Kindergarten, Educational Reformers, Child Study and recent educational movements.

Principles and Methods of Instruction.

1. General Method. (a) Method as a subjective and objective activity. (b) The three views in the development of the idea of method. (c) The study of leading works on method, and of the use of the term in general writings, to determine the prevalent view. (d) The steps in obtaining the central truth of a branch of study. (e) The elements of a branch of study that may be derived from the central truth—scope; divisions; relative importance of divisions; mental steps in investigating any fact of the subject; effect of the study of the subject; devices or means.

2. Special Method—in Language. (a) Steps in determining the central idea in Language. (b) Derivation from the central truth, of scope; divisions; relative importance of divisions; mental steps in the study of any language fact; effect of the study of Language; devices or means in teaching Language.

3. Principles in the interpretation and in the organization of lessons.

Practice.

The practice work consists of observation and teaching in the practice schools. The pupils taught are children belonging to the regular grades of the Terre Haute city school system.

The work consists of the following phases:

1. Lessons given on certain days by the students or regular teachers in the presence of the practice class as a whole.

2. Lessons given each day at different hours when the practice class as a whole is not present.

3. The observation of lessons given by the regular teacher in charge of the room.

On the day succeeding the presentation, the lesson given is discussed.

In connection with the practice and observation work in each grade, the teacher in charge of the room makes careful explanations of the details of the work, the organization of the school, the program, etc.

Elective Work.

Experimental Psychology and Child Study.

Observation.

Regular Observation.—The work in Observation constitutes one of the four subjects of study for a given term. It entitles the student to one credit upon the fifty required for the full course of graduation, but it may not be substituted for any one of the nine required subjects in the pedagogical course. The work of Observation is of such a nature that value may be derived during any term in the student's course. With Psychology and Supervision as a basis, however, the results are more valuable. The work is intended to give to the students an opportunity to observe the work in the different grades of the training school. This observation is the basis for three kinds of work:

1. Having observed the presentation of a lesson, the students are led to interpret it. In this interpretation they endeavor to find the exact subject-matter, the purpose, the knowledge and habits assumed by the teacher, the steps that were taken in the lesson, devices employed, etc.
2. The acquiring of some skill in planning lessons in the different subjects.
3. Obtaining somewhat definite knowledge of the course of study and the management in the different grades.

General Observation.—This work does not entitle the student to credit. It consists of observation in the various training school rooms. The time granted for observation is from one to five hours a week. This work may be carried along with the four regular subjects of the term if a satisfactory record is being made in the regular subjects. The work in general observation begins the third Monday of the term.

HOWARD SANDISON,
Head of Department.

HISTORY.

The History work comprises three terms of work in History for the grades, and six advanced courses.

The History for the grades is intended to present an organic course for the eight grades in the public schools of the State. The subjects discussed are:

1. The nature of history.
2. Principles underlying the selection of material and teaching of history.
3. The material of history for each grade as determined by 1 and 2.

The work begins with the early Aryan race as it lived in primitive times in Europe and Asia and follows the stages of growth of civilization through Egypt, Palestine, Phoenicia, Greece, Rome, Middle Europe and finally to America.

American history is studied as the further development of the entire course of history shown in the work of the lower grades. The first term's work deals with the history work of the first four grades. The second term deals with the work of the fifth and sixth grades. The third term deals with the work of the seventh and eighth grades.

The advanced courses in history are intended to present a general outline of the growth of institutions from the beginning of recorded history to the present time. The plan and aim of the work are not essentially different from that in the grade work. By gaining wider views, the student is more able to determine the principles which underlie and govern historical growth, and to determine to what extent historical data can be organized into a science. He is made to see the relation of the race's development to the child's development more in detail than was possible in the grade work.

The first term's history work deals with Greece and the Oriental nations; the second, with Rome; the third, with the middle ages; the fourth, with the history of England; the fifth, with the history of France; the sixth, with European and American history of the nineteenth century. In both the grade work and that more advanced, extensive use is made of the library.

ELLWOOD W. KEMP,
Head of Department.

PHYSICS AND CHEMISTRY.

Physics.

The work in physics is two years. The first year will cover the ground of general physics. In the recitation work of the first term the subject will be presented under two heads:

1. Matter and Its Properties, in which some attention is given to a discussion of the molecule, physical and chemical changes, the three states of matter, the phenomena of attraction,—adhesion, cohesion, capillarity, etc.

2. Mechanics.—As motion and force, work and energy, gravitation, falling bodies, the pendulum, the simple machines, hydrostatics and pneumatics.

During the second term the work will cover:

1. Sound.—Nature of sound, velocity, reflection and refraction, characteristics of tone, forced and sympathetic vibrations, laws of vibrations, etc.

2. Heat.—Nature of heat, temperature, thermometry, production, and transference of heat, effects of heat, measurement of heat, relation of heat to work.

3. Light.—Nature of radiation, velocity and intensity of light, reflection and refraction of light, spectra, chromatics, interference, polarization and optical instruments.

The work of the third term will be Electricity and Magnetism. The class will discuss static and current electricity and magnetism, electric generators, electromagnetic induction, electrical measurements, and some of the more important applications of electricity. All points in the class work are fully illustrated by experiment. The laboratory work in general physics is, as far as possible, quantitative in character. The time in general physics is divided about equally between the recitation and the laboratory work.

The course of the second year will be advanced work in both the class and laboratory work, and will be arranged to suit the individual needs of the student.

The laboratory is fairly well equipped for work in physics, and each student is given every opportunity to make use of the apparatus. In all of the laboratory work careful notes of results obtained are required.

Connected with the work in physics is a work-shop supplied with a work bench, a lathe run by a motor, and full sets of tools, where the students in physics are taught to plan and make pieces of apparatus to illustrate the elementary principles of the subject, without having to depend upon the use of expensive apparatus made by regular dealers. Students who have had work in an academy, high school, or other school of good standing, may upon satisfactory evidence of having done good work, shorten the time of this course.

Chemistry.

As in physics, the work in chemistry is two years.

The first year will be devoted to general chemistry. In the first term, the work will be the non-metals; in the second term, the metals, and the third term will be a brief course in organic chemistry.

The work consists of daily recitations and laboratory work. It is thought that the correct way to study chemistry is by actual experimentation. The students are required to perform the experiments of the text-book and such other work as may be assigned to them, and bring the results of this work to the lecture room for discussion. Such other illustrative work as is deemed necessary is presented to the class by the instructor.

The work of the second year will be qualitative and quantitative analysis. Twenty weeks will be given to each of these divisions of the subject. This work will be almost entirely laboratory work—ten hours per week being required of each student.

The chemical laboratory is well supplied with every convenience for pursuing the work in chemistry as far as it is carried in this course.

Students who have had work in chemistry in an academy, high school or other school of good standing may, upon satisfactory evidence of having done good work, shorten the time of this course.

ROBERT G. GILLUM,
Head of Department.

BIOLOGY.

The work in this department will consist of two terms in animal physiology, both of which are required, six terms in zoology and six terms in botany, all of which are electives for persons advanced in the course. Provision is thus made for practically five solid years of work in biology, making it possible to become sufficiently acquainted with the elements of the subjects to teach the same acceptably in our common and secondary schools.

It is the aim in the physiology work to present that science in accordance with the modern view of physiology, which rests its conclusions on scientific observation and experiment. The work, therefore, is almost entirely of a practical nature intended to show at first hand all the simpler physiological phenomena. For persons desiring a more advanced course in physiology than that offered in the two terms required, two additional terms of work are offered. Of these, the first term will be devoted to a study of the uses of modern physiological apparatus, such as the Myograph, the Sphygmograph, the Kymograph, Tambours, DuBois-Reymond Induction Coils, etc. The school possesses some of the best apparatus available, and the physiology of nerve and muscle stimulation, of reaction-time, of the blood-flow, etc., is practically demonstrated. The second term's work is devoted to a study of the elements of physiological chemistry, and consists of a hundred or more experiments in digestion, blood-coagulation and the qualitative, and, in a few instances, the quantitative determination of the more important compounds occurring in the body.

The work in zoology will extend through two years, and is designed to extend the work in practical physiology, and as an introduction to a scientific interpretation of the fauna of this region. The first year is devoted to a study of the general morphology of type-forms from the entire field of zoology. Lectures and discussions along the lines of general ecology, problems of adaptation and development, theories of heredity and of the origin of forms will supplement the laboratory work. In the second year, one term will be devoted to the elements of animal histology and the embryology of the vertebrates. The second and third terms will be devoted to systematic zoology, one term to ornithology alone. The museum of the school contains many specimens illustrative of the fauna of Indiana.

The work offered in botany extends through two years. The first year covers the usual ground of elementary plant morphology, physiology and ecology. The second year's work is a more critical study of plant life and forms. The first term is devoted to Algae and Fungi, the second to the Bryophytes and Pteridophytes, and the third to the Spermatophytes.

In both zoology and botany, nearly all the work is laboratory and field work. No regular text-books are used, though the library has most of the best reference books on these subjects, which are always available to students.

The biological department is quite well equipped with good apparatus for modern work in biology, and the laboratory accommodates at one time forty students with desks especially fitted out for microscopic and general laboratory work.

LOUIS J. RETTGER,
Head of Department.

LIBRARY.

The Library is comfortably situated in the new building. The entire floor above the basement is devoted to library purposes, thus giving ten thousand square feet to this department. Light, heat, ventilation, architectural beauty, and, above all, adaptability to the special purpose in view, have been prime considerations in its construction.

The library at present contains over thirty thousand volumes. The old library having been entirely destroyed, the books we have are new and carefully selected with reference to the special needs of our school, so that the number alone gives no real conception of its working capacity. A special fund enables us to buy such books and periodicals as are needed in the regular work of the school, and the design is to build up gradually and steadily a large reference library especially strong in pedagogical literature.

Purpose, Aim, Methods.

The Library is the general laboratory or workshop of the whole school. Text-books serve their more legitimate function as guides in the various subjects taught, and students are sent to the library with references more or less specific according to their advancement and individual needs, to the leading authorities and sources of information.

Instruction in the use of the library is both general and specific. The general instruction is given in the form of talks, explaining briefly (1) the nature and practical use of the card catalogue, the classification and shelf arrangement of the books, the rules and regulations; (2) the use of the title pages, perfaces, indexes, tables of contents, etc.; (3) the scope and special value of the general reference books, such as encyclopedias, dictionaries, atlases, periodicals and bibliographies. Besides instruction of this kind, individual assistance, so far as other duties of the library staff will permit, is rendered (1) in the search for the latest and best information upon particular topics, (2) in the guidance and selection of material for collateral and general reading, and (3) in explaining the mechanical contrivances of various authors, and in helping to answer the great number of questions that continually arise.

An immediate advantage of such a method of instruction is the conversion of the routine and spiritless recitation of the old regime into a varied and animated presentation of subject-matter gleaned from many eminent authors and original documents. There is here also an opportunity to meet those individual needs that are determined by the laws of heredity, physiological accidents, and previous training. A knowledge of books, a breadth of view, and an enthusiasm for truth are permanent and sure results of a right use of the library. By systematic training in scholarly habits of research it is believed that a pupil will leave this school greatly strengthened and enabled to pursue successfully his life work.

ARTHUR CUNNINGHAM,

Librarian.

LITERATURE.

In this department two courses in elementary literature or reading are required of all students except college graduates and those holding three years', or higher, licenses. In addition an opportunity is offered to do six courses of consecutive work in English and American Literature. In all of these courses the main object is to come into close relations with the literature itself. The practical problem of using literature as a means of education in the school room receives the attention necessarily required in a professional school.

Elementary Literature and Reading.

Course 1. A number of selections suitable for seventh and eighth year grades and first year of high school are studied and discussed in great detail in class. The simpler laws of literary method are thus inductively developed, and the fact is made clear that a piece of literature is an organism. In addition to other shorter selections the following are used: Snow-Bound, Enoch Arden, The Vision of Sir Launfal, The Legend of Sleepy Hollow, Michael, The Great Stone Face, Sella, Sohrab and Rustum, Rosabelle, Alice Brand, The King of the Golden River. (Each term.)

Course 2. This carries the plan and purpose of the preceding course into a study of more difficult material. Some longer selections are used also as introductions to fiction and the drama. The following indicate the standard of selections used: The Rime of the Ancient Mariner, Lycidas, The Prisoner of Chillon, Pheidippides, Evangeline, The Lady of the Lake, Silas Marner, Shakespeare's Macbeth, or Julius Caesar. (Each term.)

Advanced Literature.

These courses are entirely elective. A student electing literature must take at least three courses; he may take as many as six. The work is so arranged as to admit of considerable freedom in choice of courses.

Course 1. English Literature. An outline of the development of the literature with rapid and extended readings in the more representative authors of each period. Halleck's History of English Literature is used as a text. An attempt is made to connect closely the literary and historical and social movements of the English people. This outline course, or its equivalent, must precede the other courses in English literature. (Twice a year—Fall and Spring terms.)

Course 2. English Poets. In this course some two or three writers are chosen and studied at length. Complete and authorized texts are used and the purpose of the work is to come into touch with the poet at first-hand. The life of the author, his relation to his age, the character and value of his message, and the fitness of his work for class use will be considered. The poets studied will vary from year to year. For 1903-4, Tennyson and Browning will be studied.

(Winter term.)

Course 3. English Prose. As in Course 2, a few authors are chosen and studied at first-hand. It is necessary here, also, to limit the study to a few masterpieces, generally one from each writer. The aim is to grasp and appreciate at their true value the chief qualities of the author's thought and style. Swift's Gulliver's Travels, Carlyle's Sartor Resartus, and Ruskin's Sesame and Lilies will form the basis of this course.

(Summer term.)

Course 4. Shakespeare. The origin and growth of the drama in England, the special features of Elizabethan life which throw light on the great play-producing activity of that time, Shakespeare's life and work, are topics briefly considered as a basis for the course. The chief points in the technique of the drama are discussed in connection with the study of some five or six of Shakespeare's plays. These are so chosen as to furnish examples of his work at different stages of its development, and one play at least is read in the version of the First Folio. During the past year the plays used were: Love's Labor's Lost, Twelfth Night, Julius Caesar, Coriolanus, King Lear, Cymbeline. Lee's Shakespeare's Life and Work (students' edition) is in the hands of each student in addition to standard editions of the plays selected. A strong effort is made to understand and appreciate the main elements of Shakespeare's power as an interpreter of life. (Spring term.)

Course 5. American Poetry. The writings of the leading American poets are used. Representative poems, not already used in the elementary courses, are studied in detail, while students are required to read rapidly enough of each author's production to have clear notions of its scope and value. The list includes Poe, Longfellow, Lowell, Whittier, Bryant, Holmes and Whitman. Newcomer's American Literature is used for the historical outline. (Fall term.)

Course 6. American Prose. This is a companion course to 5. The field is too extensive to be covered even by rapid reading, and selected masterpieces from each author are used. The list includes Franklin, Irving, Poe, Hawthorne, Emerson, Thoreau, Lowell. Readings in Newcomer's American Literature continued. (Winter term.)

Course 7. Fiction. A number of typical short stories by both British and American authors are first read for the purpose of illustrating plot, setting, character portrayal, grouping and development, the relations of fiction to life and to other literary forms. The development of English fiction is then rapidly sketched in a brief series of discussions based upon Cross's Development of the English Novel and Raleigh's The English Novel. The list of novels for the present year includes Ivanhoe, The Mill on the Floss, A Tale of Two Cities, Henry Osmond, The Scarlet Letter and Treasure Island. The value of fiction in education and the best means of using it are considered. Perry's A Study of Prose Fiction is used as the basis of this course. (Summer term.)

Course 8. Literary Criticism. This course is designed for those preparing to teach literature, and its purpose is to summarize and, to some extent, organize the facts of the subject as these have been developed in the other courses. Extended readings are required in some of the organized discussions of this subject, such as, Winchester, Worsfold, Johnson, Posnet, Magnus, etc., while some of the more classic discussions

(Aristotle, Horace, Sidney) will be examined. The sections dealing with literature in Chubb's The Teaching of English serve as suggestions in dealing with the pedagogy of the subject. The library is unusually well equipped in works on literary criticism, and with complete files of all the leading periodicals in which much pedagogical material of the highest value is to be found. This course is practically limited to present and prospective teachers of literature who are already fairly well acquainted with the field. (Summer term.)

CHARLES M. CURRY,
Head of Department.

GEOGRAPHY.

The course in geography is organized in accordance with the views of the leading German, British and American geographers, of which the following are among the best expressions:

"General geography deals with the general laws of the distribution of every class of phenomena on the earth's surface."—Neumann.

"Geography is the exact and organized knowledge of the distribution of phenomena on the surface of the earth, culminating in the explanation of the interaction of man with his terrestrial environment."—Mill.

"The whole content of geography is the study of the relation of the earth and its inhabitants. * * * It is the element of relationship between the physical environment and the environed organism that constitutes the essential principle of geography."—Davis.

Geography falls naturally into two co-ordinate sub-sciences, physiography, which deals with the physical environment, and ontography, which deals with the environed organism, while complete geography deals with the relations between the two.

The first great relation of geography is that of relief and climate, the second that of plant and animal life to both, the third that of man and his culture to all the rest, to his whole physical environment. The earth's surface and man are the terminal links of the chain. No one of them can be understood without a knowledge of those which precede. The geography of man rests upon a very broad foundation of physical science and in turn forms a part of the foundations of history, sociology and political economy. Geography is the bridge which unites the sciences of nature with the sciences of man. If this view of geography is correct, there can be but one method of teaching it, the scientific method, by direct, personal observation of the phenomena in the field and laboratory, with the actual objects in view wherever possible, and when that is impossible, with the best representations of them.

The geographical laboratory is planned as a workshop for the student and teacher. It is used for the storage and display of the best geographical material in the form of specimens, pictures, lantern slides, maps and models illustrating typical forms and distributions. Among these, and largely by their means, the student is expected to prepare his lesson for the recitation. The laboratory material includes Howell's models of the United States, Yellowstone Park, Canyon of the Colorado, High Plateaus of Utah, Wasatch and Uinta Mountains, Henry Mountains, Mount Vesuvius, Mount Shasta, Mont Blanc, Mount Desert Island, New Jersey and Southern New England; and a collection of more than one thousand pictures and lantern slides and nearly two thousand maps and drawings. The equipment is being constantly increased.

The school library contains nearly everything available in the literature of geography, including numerous copies of the best reference books.

It is obviously impossible to study thoroughly the whole field of geography in one year. It is thought better to select certain portions of it for intensive study than to attempt a superficial treatment of a broader field. Four courses are given, including those topics which seem most fundamental and available for illustrating the general principles of the science and the best methods of its presentation.

Course 1. Physiography. The structure of the earth. Land forms produced by external forces acting through the agency of air, water and ice. Seventy-five hours of class room and laboratory work, with four to six field excursions. The field work is insisted upon as fundamental, and will be extended as fast as facilities permit.

(Fall, Spring and Summer terms.)

Course 2. Physiography. The earth in space. The atmosphere and climate. The sea. Sixty hours of class room and laboratory work, with daily instrumental observations of the weather.

(Winter and summer terms.)

Course 3. Physiography. Land forms due to internal forces. Summary of land sculpture and the physiographic cycle. The atmosphere and climate as in Course 2. Must be preceded by Course 1. Sixty hours and weather observations.

(Fall, winter and spring terms.)

Course 4. The geography of the United States. A fairly exhaustive study of our own country, its physiographic regions, climate, products and inhabitants, designed to afford a review and application of the principles learned in the preceding courses, and to emphasize the relations of human culture and industrial, commercial and social conditions to the physical environment. Must be preceded by Courses 1 and 2 or 1 and 3. Sixty hours of class work and drawing maps of the United States and Europe on conic projections, a map of North America on a polyconic projection, and a map of the world on Mercator's projection.

(Every term.)

CHARLES R. DRYER,
Head of Department.

PENMANSHIP AND DRAWING.Penmanship.

All should write legibly. Courtesy requires it and business demands it. Rapid writing is necessary in business. To write legibly and rapidly and for a lengthy period requires proper positions that the work may be done with ease. The teacher, above all others, should be master of these requirements if he would teach others to write. Theory without work is dead.

One term is devoted to the subject of writing. Proper positions for desk and blackboard writing are explained and practiced. Unshaded work in script, figures and printing is used and for this work a stiff pen is recommended as the best. The modern style capitals and small letters are standard. Any slant that gives legible, rapid writing may be used. Good board work must be done by every student.

Drawing.

Six terms are offered.

The teacher who is able to illustrate by a quickly executed drawing has a point of excellence that must command the attention of school people in general. The lack of this ability is acknowledged and deplored by the great majority of teachers.

The educational value of drawing is not to be underestimated. Careful observation, accuracy of representation, dispatch and neatness are shown nowhere better than in a problem in drawing, and together are a good indication of a student's ability and method.

Add to these the cultivation of the imagination and the consideration and a better understanding of what is considered most beautiful in nature and in art, and there seems sufficient reasons for introducing this subject into our public school courses.

The purpose of instruction in this department is not to make artists or to help finish a few pretty things, but rather to help teachers prepare themselves so they may be able to present in a more pleasing and instructive manner many of the subjects in their school work.

During the six terms the pencil, charcoal, pen, brush and color will be used. Board work will be emphasized, and, whenever practicable, outdoor work will be undertaken.

1. Drawing from familiar objects, of simple form, which present characteristic appearance without showing thickness, shade or shadow—as a book, map, etc. Easy problems in construction, paper cutting and weaving.

2. More advanced work of preceding term and drawing from simple forms placed so as to show thickness and involving a consideration of rules of perspective. Composition. Geometric problems.

3. Perspective problems. More advanced geometric work and design. Study of masterpieces.

4. Drawing from casts and from life and more advanced work in preceding subjects.

5. Above continued. Special consideration of different mediums. Art history.

6. Drawing in connection with other subjects. School room decoration. Drawing courses and the supervisor. Art history.

WILLIAM T. TURMAN.

Head of Department.

GRAMMAR AND COMPOSITION.

The work of this department consists of two distinct lines—the grammar, the unit or subject-matter of which is the sentence, and the composition, the unit or subject-matter of which is discourse. The chief mental process involved in the mastery of the first is analysis; in the second it is synthesis. The time devoted to each of these subjects may be learned by consulting the courses of study.

Grammar.

The sentence, with its numerous forms and many shades of meaning, is the subject of grammar. This great variety must be thought into the unity of a single principle. Every fact of the subject must be interpreted and seen in the light of this principle, if grammar is to be understood. That there is and must be such a general truth in every subject is clear, from the fact that subjects exist. It is not chance or caprice that has separated facts into arithmetic, geography, grammar, etc. There must be some idea in the subject which determines what facts belong to it, and to which all these facts are related. This will be the most general fact in the subject, since it must contain all the others, and every fact in the subject will embody, in a greater or less degree, this central idea, thus making the subject a unity.

It is the purpose of the grammar work in this school to enable the student to get such a view of the subject. The student must see all the relations which exist in the sentence; the relation of the sentence to other language forms, the word and discourse; its relation to the thought which it expresses; and its relations to mind, the products of which it embodies. When he sees all these relations and what they determine with regard to the sentence, the student may be said to have an organized or a teaching knowledge of the subject of grammar. He has constructed the subject for himself.

In order to accomplish what is set forth above, four circles of work are pursued:

1. Under the study of the sentence as a whole, the class whole is studied. In this work the unity of all sentences is seen by observing their universal attributes.
2. Under the study of the sentence as a whole, the class whole is divided into sub-classes, and the marks of these classes are discovered.
3. Under the study of sentences in parts, the organic parts are first taken up. This circle of work with parts corresponds to the first circle of work with sentences as wholes.

4. Under the study of sentences in parts, the sub-classes of words, "Parts of Speech," are studied. The fourth circle of the work is to the third what the second is to the first.

In each of the four circles the student starts with the sentence, and after the consideration of parts, refers them all back to the sentence again—analysis and synthesis. The process is a passing from unity through variety back to the unity of the thought as expressed in the universal sentence form.

It is the purpose, also, to present the entire work in such a way as to give the student most skill in the use of the language.

Composition.

The language subjects, which deal with discourse, are distinguished from one another by the view they take of the subject-matter. Reading and literature deal with discourse analytically; the chief mental process in composition and rhetoric is synthesis. Composition is the complement of reading. It presents the nature and principles of the different forms of discourse, and their relations to the mind of the author and the minds of those addressed.

Three kinds of work are done in this subject:

1. A critical study of models of the different forms of discourse is made for the purpose of enabling the student to discover the central idea in all discourse; the relations in the process as determined by the theme; and the laws of the process as determined by the mind addressed. For this purpose, masterpieces of our best writers are used so far as practicable. In this way the student becomes acquainted with the principles of discourse in their concrete embodiment, and forms a good standard by which to criticise his own writing.

2. The students are helped to formulate the above mentioned inferences into the science of discourse by reference to different texts on the subject.

3. A great deal of writing under careful criticism is required.

JOHN B. WISELY,

Head of Department.

MATHEMATICS.

The work in mathematics comprises two terms in arithmetic, four terms in algebra, three terms in plane and solid geometry, one term in trigonometry, one term in analytical geometry, one term in the theory of equations or elementary calculus, and one term in the history and teaching of mathematics.

Arithmetic.

The first term is given to the study of the origin of number, the expression of number, the fundamental operations, vulgar and decimal fractions, and the English and French systems of weights and measures.

The second term is given to mensuration and to percentage and its applications.

Algebra.

Course 1. Three terms. The following are the principal topics treated:

1. The fundamental laws of operation, and the system of rational numbers.
2. Integral and fractional polynomials.
3. Laws of exponential operations and the system of irrational and imaginary numbers.

Conditional equations are begun in the first term and are treated at appropriate times in each term's work.

In this course Stringham's revision of Charles Smith's Algebra is used as a basis for examples and problems.

Course 2. One term. This course treats of progressions and other simple series, permutations and combinations, indeterminate forms, convergency and divergency of series, logarithmic computation, interest and annuities, summation of series, and determinants.

Dickson's College Algebra is used in this course.

Geometry.

The first and second terms are given to plane, and the third term to solid and spherical geometry. The text is completed, including all of the independent exercises. Close attention is given to the principles of duality and continuity and the law of converse.

Schultze and Sevenoak's geometry is used as a text.

Trigonometry.

The course is devoted to the trigonometric functions, the development of formulae, the reduction of trigonometric equations, and the solution of triangles. The department is supplied with a transit, a leveling rod, steel tapes, pins, etc., and some field work is done.

Announcements are made with respect to analytical geometry, theory of equations or calculus, and the history and teaching of mathematics for the first time, and are meant to be effective one year hence. In order that students may reach these more advanced subjects before graduating, it will be necessary that they begin work in mathematics immediately on entering school and continue it without interruption.

In the coming year one or more of these advanced subjects will be given if students are ready.

OSCAR L. KELSO,
Head of Department.

LATIN AND GERMAN.

The work offered in each of the two languages falls into two parts—an elementary course and a group of more advanced courses. The former of these includes a thorough study of the elements and the reading of easy prose. Throughout this course especial stress is laid upon translations from English into the foreign language, in order to make the student's grasp of the indispensable fundamentals as clear and sure as possible. This course embraces the first five terms offered in Latin, and the first four terms offered in German.

Each of the more advanced courses in both languages extends through one term with five hours of class-work a week. The individual courses are thus as nearly independent of each other as possible, and while they are numbered approximately according to their grade of advancement, yet they may in most cases be taken up in a different order, to suit the program of the student. When students have had all their elementary work in other schools, however, or when they have not been in regular attendance at the Normal School for some time, they should consult the head of the department as to the courses which it would be advisable for them to elect. General restrictions upon the election of certain individual courses will be mentioned in the description of the courses which is given below.

Latin.

Elementary Course (five terms). In the first three terms, Tuell and Fowler's First Book in Latin, with additional exercises as they are found necessary; for additional reading in the third term, Collar's Via Latina. In the fourth and fifth terms, three books of Caesar and several biographies of Nepos; Jones' Latin Composition (first half).

The terms of this course can be taken only in their regular order, and the entire course, or a satisfactory equivalent in high school work, must precede any of the more advanced courses.

Course 6. Virgil, three books. Translation and metrical reading.

Course 7. Cicero's Orations. Exercises in writing Latin from Jones' Composition (second half), and an outline study of the Roman government in Cicero's time.

In connection with courses 8, 10 and 11 the class has exercises from Gildersleeve and Lodge's Latin Composition.

Course 8. Livy. An outline of Roman history.

Course 9. Terence, two plays. A brief history of Latin literature; the development of Latin forms.

Course 10. Horace, Satires and Epistles. Geography of the Roman world, and topography of Rome.

Course 11. Cicero, De Senectute and Tacitus, Agricola. Roman private and public life.

Course 12. Teachers' Training Course. This course should be preceded by at least three of the courses just mentioned (6-11). In it particular attention will be given to the problems of the first two years of Latin study. Special subjects in the grammar and selected parts of Caesar will be carefully studied from the teacher's point of view. From time to time specific lessons in that stage of the work will be carefully prepared and discussed by the class, and then taught by some member of it. Various subsidiary lines of study which are helpful to a high school teacher will also be taken up, and information will be gained concerning books of reference, texts, etc.

German.

Elementary Course (four terms). In the first three terms, Spanhoofd's Lehrbuch der deutschen Sprache and Lange's German Method, with additional reading from easy authors. In the fourth term, a short comedy and several short stories from Riehl, Storm, Ebner-Eschenbach or other writers; Bernhardt's German Composition.

The terms of this course can be taken only in their regular order, and the entire course, or a satisfactory equivalent in high school work, must precede any of the more advanced courses.

In connection with the following four courses there will be occasional exercises in writing German, and a brief study of the lives and times of the authors. So far as possible, German will be made the medium of instruction.

Course 5. Schiller, one drama, and parts of others as time allows.

Course 6. Modern Prose. Selections from the prose works of Heine, Freytag, Keller, Wildenbruch, or other authors.

Course 7. Goethe, Iphigenie or Torquato Tasso, and Goetz von Berlichingen.

Course 8. History of modern German literature, with illustrative readings from a number of representative authors.

Course 9. Teachers' Course. (a) A systematic course in German grammar, advanced composition and conversation. (b) A discussion of difficult and important points involved in the teaching of elementary German. This course should be preceded by at least two of the courses just mentioned (5-8).

JOHN J. SCHLICHER,

Head of Department.

PHYSICAL TRAINING.

The two gymnasias are situated in the basement, under the Library. They are equipped with modern appliances and apparatus for developing and training the body. Connected with each are baths, with hot and cold water. Before entering the gymnasium a physical examination, consisting of measurements and tests, is made for each student. The condition of heart, lungs, digestion and nervous system is carefully noted; also any local defects, such as round shoulders, muscular weakness in any part, abnormal curvature of the spine, varicose veins, etc. The Directors prescribe exercises for the special needs of individual students, who may then work toward building up the whole body. Special movements will be given for palpitation of the heart, indigestion, recurrent headache, obesity, abnormal leanness, nervousness, etc.

Class work will consist of carefully graded work in light and heavy gymnastics, free-hand exercises, games and sports of various kinds. Swimming and lawn tennis, field hockey, outdoor basket ball and other games and sports are available in spring, summer and fall terms. Special work in public school gymnastics, lectures upon personal hygiene, school sanitation and physical defects common to school children, will be included.

Three terms in this department are required before graduation. A credit is given for three terms.

A fine athletic field, five acres in extent, has been purchased and will be fitted with tennis courts, baseball diamond, football gridiron, hockey field, cinder track, and outdoor basket ball court.

A grand-stand with dressing rooms and bath underneath will be built, and all facilities for out-of-door sport will be placed in the field.

Intercollegiate athletics and all contest games are under the control of the Athletic Association, an organization of students.

JOHN P. KIMMELL,

Director (Men).

EDITH MACLURE LOVE,

Director (Women).

MUSIC.

The work of this department is elective.

The work of the first term includes the study of: The major, chromatic, and minor scales, as to their formation and uses.

1. Two, three, four and six-part measure, and the simpler rhythms of these measures.
2. The first law of harmonization.
3. The period form in melody construction.
4. Elementary work in expression, ear-training and sight-reading.

In the second term, the work of the first term is continued. Advanced work in melody-writing and the second law of harmonization are given. Independent sight-singing, however, is the principal result of this term's work.

The work of the third term broadens and strengthens that of the two terms previous. The method of teaching music in the schools is discussed and practically demonstrated, as the students of this term have the opportunity of observing music lessons in the Training and City schools.

At the beginning of each school year, a Chorus Class is organized. Students who have some knowledge of music, or who have had experience in singing, may enter this class at the beginning of any term. For three terms of chorus work a credit for second term music is given.

The work done by this class is the study of anthems and hymns for chapel exercises, choruses from standard oratorios, operas, etc. This year the work was the "Hallelujah Chorus," from the Messiah, "Hail, Bright Abode," and the "Pilgrims' Chorus," from Tannhauser; one scene from Gounod's "Faust," and the entire opera "The Bohemian Girl," by Balfe.

LELLA PARR,

Head of Department.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

CONDITIONS OF ADMISSION.

LEGAL.—Sixteen years of age, if females; eighteen, if males. Good health. Satisfactory evidence of undoubted moral character. A pledge that the applicant wishes to enter the school in good faith to prepare to teach, if practicable, in the public schools of Indiana.

SCHOLASTIC.—The following classes of students are admitted and credited as explained below:

College Graduates and Holders of Life State Licenses.—Graduates of colleges and universities which maintain standard college courses of not less than four years and persons holding life State licenses issued in Indiana, or of equal grade in other States, are admitted without examination to the Senior year.

Holders of Professional or Sixty Months' Licenses.—Persons holding professional or sixty months' licenses are admitted without examination to the Junior Class.

Holders of Thirty-six Months' Licenses.—Persons holding one or more thirty-six months' licenses are admitted without examination to the Sophomore Class. Such students receive fifteen credits on the course. Thirty-five additional credits are necessary for graduation.

Graduates of Commissioned High Schools.—Graduates of commissioned high schools and persons of equal scholarship are admitted without examination to the Sophomore Class. Such persons receive fourteen credits on the course. Thirty-six additional credits are necessary for graduation.

Holders of Two Years' or One Year Licenses, and Graduates of Non-Commissioned High Schools.—Persons holding two years' or one year county licenses, and graduates of town and township high schools having a course of not less than three years, are admitted without examination to the Freshman Class. Fifty credits—four years' work—are necessary for graduation.

Holders of Six Months' Licenses.—Persons holding one or more six months' county licenses, and graduates of the common schools, are admitted without examination to a preparatory course of one or more terms. The work done in this course is not credited on the regular courses of the school, the object being simply to prepare the individual by one or two terms' study for the regular courses offered.

Persons not holding diplomas or licenses as explained above are required to take the regular entrance examinations. Persons desiring more advanced standing than that given on diplomas or licenses as explained above are required to pass satisfactory examinations in the additional subjects for which credits are desired.

Time for Entering.

For all reasons it is best to be present at the opening of the term, but students are admitted at any time in the year. Experience has shown that persons entering several days or weeks late and attempting to carry the regular number of studies and make a full term's credits are usually crippled in their work throughout the term. Hereafter persons entering three weeks or more after the opening of the term will be limited for the term to such number of studies as they can profitably carry.

Certificates and Diplomas.

Under the law, when students complete the course of study, they receive certificates of graduation, not diplomas. "At the expiration of two years after graduation, satisfactory evidence of professional ability to instruct and manage a school having been received, they (graduates) shall be entitled to a diploma appropriate to such professional degrees as the trustees shall confer upon them; which diplomas shall be considered sufficient evidence of qualification to teach in any of the schools of the State."

DISCIPLINE OF THE SCHOOL.

The end of all school government and discipline, intelligently conceived and administered, is the rational self-control and self-direction of the pupil. This is to be the outcome in the pupil. The effort is made to derive all rules of government from the inherent nature and purposes of the organization itself. This is the true basis of such rules; from this alone they derive their authority, and not from the teacher's will and utterance. A system of school regulations which aims only at arbitrary restraint, without leading the pupil to order his conduct by clearly conceived principles of right doing, lacks the most essential educative qualities. The formation of correct habits of thought and action, the development of worthy character; these are the true aims of school discipline. The discipline of the Normal School is administered in this general thought and spirit. Students are led to see the reasonableness of the requirements made of them, so that their obedience may be intelligent and educative. In respect to discipline, as in all other particulars, the Normal School seeks to make itself in fact what it must be by definition—a model school.

EXPENSES.

Board, including fuel and light, can be had in good families at $3 to $4 per week, according to the quality of accommodations. There are good facilities for self-boarding and for club-boarding in the city at a cost of $1.75 to $2.00 per week. Nearly all the students board in clubs, thus reducing their entire expenses for board and room rent to $2.50 or $3.00 per week for good accommodations. The expenses of many do not exceed $2.25 per week. The only charge made by the school is a library fee of $2 per term.

The necessary expenses for a year in the Normal School will not vary greatly from the following estimate:

Room rent, 39 weeks, at $1.....	$39 00
Board, 39 weeks, at $2.....	78 00
Fuel and lights.....	7 50
Washing and incidentals.....	25 00
Library fee, $2 per term.....	6 00
Books and stationery.....	15 00

Necessary expenses for one year, 39 weeks. $170 50

ADVANCED STANDING BY EXAMINATION.

The Normal School is authorized to give a formal credit on its course to the following classes of students: (1) College graduates; (2) graduates of commissioned high schools; (3) persons holding life State licenses; (4) persons holding professional or sixty-months' licenses; (5) persons holding three-years' county licenses. These are all admitted without examination.

Persons not included in the above named classes, and wishing to be credited with any subjects in the course, are required to pass thorough, satisfactory examinations in such subjects. Effort is made to give every person full credit for all knowledge of subjects possessed on entering, and to assist him to advance as rapidly and to graduate as soon as is consistent with a thorough teacher's knowledge of the subjects studied.

Examinations conducted for passing persons out of given subjects without detailed study of these in the school are made thorough, extended and professional in character. The object is not simply to test the applicant's knowledge of the subject in its academic aspects, but to ascertain what he knows of it from a teacher's point of view. The psychology of the subject, its method and its educational value are considered in these examinations.

Examinations for advanced standing will hereafter be conducted on the first and second days of each term.

Persons wishing to substitute credits on the Normal School course that have been made at other reputable institutions are referred to the various heads of departments, who will make such investigations and conduct such examinations as they deem best. Just credit will be given for all scholarship and professional training acquired at other institutions.

ELECTIVE WORK.

Students are required to elect work by subjects, not by terms. When a student elects a subject he is required to take all the work offered in that subject, unless, for good reasons, he is permitted by the faculty to discontinue it and take up another line of study in its place. This rule does not apply to Latin, German, or Music. In German the student elects by years; in Latin those electing the subject are required to take at least five terms' work; in Music the first term only may be elected and taken as a fifth study, but if the second term is elected, both the second and third terms are required and are carried as fourth studies.

THE TWO CHRISTIAN ORGANIZATIONS OF THE SCHOOL.

The Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. are the two Christian organizations of the school. They have for their principal object the development of a more perfect Christian character in each of its members and the bringing of those who have never known the Christian life to a realization of its beauty and power.

The associations employ different means to accomplish their purpose. Each association holds one regular devotional meeting every week. The young men's meeting is held on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Association Room; the young women's meeting is held on Thursday at the same time and place.

A joint meeting of the two associations is held every Saturday morning, from 11:10 to 12 o'clock, in the Association

INDIANA STATE
NORMAL LIBRARY

Room. These meetings are usually led by some member of the faculty or a minister from some church of the city.

A regular course of Bible study is planned and carried out each year. The work as now planned requires four years for its completion. The first year class studies "The Life of Christ as found in the Gospels." The second year class studies "The Establishment and Extension of Christianity and the Christian Church." The third year's work is "Old Testament Studies—History." The fourth year's work is "The Study of the Bible as Showing Throughout the Growth of the Spirit of which the Christ was the Culmination." The meeting places, the classes and the teachers of each are not given, for changes are usually made at the opening of the school year.

Two receptions are given each term. The first, at the beginning of the term, is for the reception of the new students. A very commendable feature of these receptions is the spirit manifested by the old students in helping the new students to feel at home.

There are two classes of members in each of the associations, the "active" and the "associate." The first is made up of those connected in good standing with some evangelical church; the second class, of young men and women of good moral character who are interested in Christian work, though not connected with any church.

The Association Room is located at the northwest end of the fourth floor of the new building, and is furnished with piano, desk, chairs and hymn books—in fact, everything that is needed to conserve the interests of the associations.

The faculty is in perfect sympathy with the work of the associations. Some are teachers of Bible classes, while others assist in the joint meetings and general work of the two societies.

CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION HOUSE.

The Young Women's Christian Association of the school has rented and furnished a large house to be used as its headquarters and as a rooming place for women of the school. The large, well heated and well lighted rooms are rented at the moderate price of five dollars a month for each person. For the comfort of those rooming in the house and a limited number from the outside, table board has been provided at the regular price of club board in Terre Haute—two dollars a week.

The house is under the supervision of Miss Mary J. Anderson, of the Faculty. Application for room and board may be made to Miss Anderson, 414 North Sixth Street.
