ABSTRACT

The purpose of this study was to determine if there was a correlation between the number of reported incidences of rape and stalking on college campuses and campuses that utilize CampusClarity by EVERFI as an educational tool to “reduce risky student behavior and prevent sexual assault on your campus.” The study investigated the relationship between the dependent variables, incidences of rape and stalking, versus the independent variables: partnership, men’s population, women’s population, on-campus drug crime, on-campus alcohol crime, on-campus domestic violence, and on-campus dating violence. The 11,181 campuses that report crime data required by the Clery Act were included as data with partnership information on 186 reported partners. A multiple linear regression analyses was used to determine a correlation. The results of the study show a positive statistically significant correlation between rape and stalking with partnership. This does not necessarily mean that partnership increases the occurrences of sexual assault. It is possible that the campuses that use these tools are already different from campuses that do not utilize their tools. A lack of information on implementation could also lead to varying results, as early and repetitive implementation could lead to less assaults occurring. It is also possible that the universities that utilize these tools are producing better educated students regarding sexual assault, which means they are more likely to report incidences than students at campuses that do not provide this type of training to its students, staff, and faculty.

PREFACE

Students entering university are able to experience newfound freedoms and vulnerabilities. Literature suggests that many students will face sexual assault and harassment throughout their time in college.

Laws and regulations have placed some burden of sexual assault and harassment prevention on college campuses. Many universities have taken the initiative to implement educational programs with the intention of lower sexual assault and harassment on their college campuses. One such program, CampusClarity by EVERFI, attempts to educate students through a digital bystander intervention program.

The large number of campus partners sets the stage for research on the efficacy of the program. It is possible that the implementation of a digital education program will reduce the number of incidences of sexual assault and harassment on college campuses.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

My greatest appreciations go out to my committee for their support. The writing and development of this dissertation has proven to be one of the most tedious endeavors of my life. A special thanks goes out to my advisor and chair, Dr. Clyburn, who has been supporting me and giving me advice since I arrived at Indiana State University almost eight years ago. Your time spent in my office sharing advice, wisdom, and many, many stories has been invaluable to me.

To my colleagues who have supported me throughout my time as a graduate assistant, an instructor, and an advisor, thank you for your love and support. The most wonderful part of my time at Indiana State University has been my interactions with the various staff, faculty, and students here. I am leaving behind some truly amazing people that I will always remember. To Dr. Kara Harris, thank you for your mentorship from the day I arrived. You have always been kind and supportive of me and I will work hard to return that kindness in the future. To Mrs. Edie Wittenmyer, you have been one of my greatest supporters in the department since I began teaching and I cannot thank you enough for the time we have spent together. I look forward to the day we can celebrate you completing your doctoral journey as well.

To my friends and family. Thank you for helping me maintain my sanity through this journey. It definitely has not been fast or easy but I could not ask for a better support network. To my wonderful parents, Harold and Brenda, thank you for supporting my education throughout my entire life. You have always pushed me to pursue my interests in STEM and to never stop bettering myself, a philosophy I still hold onto today.

CHAPTER 1

INTRODUCTION

On April 5, 1986 a 19 year old student of Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, was raped, beaten, and murdered in her dorm room by another student who was later convicted of murder and sentenced to death (Peterson, 2013). Following the murder, her parents began lobbying to the U.S. Congress. Following media and legal efforts, the U.S. Congress passed the Student Right-to-Know and Campus Security Act of 1990, which would later become known as the Jeanne Clery Disclosure of Campus Security Policy and Campus Crime Statistics Act. This Clery Act requires all public and private universities to report their crime statistics to the Department of Education and to publish their data annually if they receive Title IV funding (McNeal, 2007). Title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965 covers the administration of federal student financial aid programs (Corporation for National and Community Service, 2019).

The Clery act requires universities to report these statistics with the purposes of (1) providing information to potential students so they can make informed decisions regarding which university to attend, (2) providing safety related notices, warnings, and notifications to students so behavior can be modified to protect themselves, and (3) reducing the overall incident of campus crime (Janosik & Ellen, 2004).

The Clery act has been modified through various years of amendments to now include university crime information on murder, robbery, forcible sex offences, non-forcible sex offenses, burglary, aggravated assault, manslaughter, arson, motor vehicle theft, weapon possession, drug related violations, liquor law violations, and hate crimes that result in bodily injury when the victim was selected based on gender, race, religious beliefs, disabilities, sexual orientation, or ethnicity (Mann & Ward, 2011). In 2008 Congress added an amendment to the Clery Act that requires emergency warnings in addition to timely warnings, so students can know as soon as possible that something has occurred and to stay alert (Fossey, 2010) (Cermak, Carter, Carter, McGarrell, & Drew, 2013).

As part of this requirement, many universities have taken the initiative to increase awareness of and education against sexual misconduct on campuses. While education without any additional initiatives is not effective in altering behavior, research suggests that students desire further education about sexual violence and want to know about campus resources (Garcia, Lechner, Frerich, Lust, & Eisenberg, 2012). This training is important to all students, not just those who are at high-risk, because victims often do not report to authorities, but will report events to their friends (who can recommend they seek assistance from university programs) (Fisher, Daigle, Cullen, & Turner, 2003).

Results of these educational awareness programs can be difficult to evaluate due to the use of different outcome measures (Vladutiu, Martin, & Macy, 2011). In a meta-analysis, Anderson & Whiston (2005) explain how research exists to show that changes in beliefs, knowledge, and attitudes are possible, but there is little quantitative research regarding the findings on the effectiveness and long-term impact of sexual misconduct program and what little information exists is inconsistent and irregular. Karjane, Fisher, & Cullen (2005) reported that some messages from sexual misconduct prevention programs might not be effective due to their messages, which sometimes blame the victims by focusing on individual students' responsibilities to avoid sexual assault.

According to a white paper by CampusClarity (2019), 'Think About It' is a program by CampusClarity, which was created in a collaboration of LawRoom and the University of San Francisco's (USF) Division of Student Life. 'Think About It' is "Designed to minimize risks associated with alcohol, drugs, and sexual violence, 'Think About It' is a research-based, comprehensive training program that empowers students to make healthy choices." 'Think About It's' online training courses are accompanied by in-depth reporting and offline support materials provided by CampusClarity.

'Think About It' uses a social norms approach to its education. The program encourages an environment that is more supportive of intervention by shifting social norms and creating social pressure to act. By changing attitudes of social norms students more accurately recognize their peers' behaviors which will ideally reduce social pressure related to drinking, drug abuse, and engaging in risky sexual activities and will be more likely to speak up against risky behavior.

The online tool uses a multifaceted approach to its delivery by including real-world stories and scenarios in segmented lessons. Delivery includes reading, imagery, narration, and videos while being interactive through game-like programming, interactive visualizations, and utilization of a point and badge system to encourage students to review optional materials that dives deeper into specific topics. Additional non-electronic resources in the form of posters and discussion guides are included as part of the program to compliment the e-learning platform.

EVERFI does not provide any public information on how the training should be implemented to universities and it appears there is some variability between how various universities utilize the program. Based on information available on university web sites, some universities provide no information regarding any prevention education (Alfred University, 2019) (Georgia Southern University, 2019) (Lamar Institute of Technology, 2019), while other universities have options for bystander intervention training by request (Illinois State University, 2019) (University of Massachusetts Lowell, 2019) or create programs to be offered throughout the academic year (Marion Technical College, 2019). Other universities even take further initiative by requiring students, faculty, and staff to complete training (Oklahoma State University, 2019) (Indiana State University, 2019). Such variance in implementation between universities without recommended implementation procedures made available could have an effect on the efficacy of the program.

Statement of the Problem

According to Krebs, Lindquist, Warner, Fisher, & Martin (2007) one in five women and one in sixteen men are sexually assaulted while attending college. More than 90% of sexual assault victims on college campuses do not report the assault (Fisher, Cullen, & Turner, 2000). Sexual misconduct can result in devastating physical and psychological effects that can result in impediments to personal and academic success in college students (Ullman, 2004) (Sugar, Fine, & Eckert, 2004). Approximately 63.3% of men at one university who reported acts qualifying as rape or attempted rape admitted to repeating these activities (Lisak, Gardinier, Nicksa, & Cote, 2010). This study indicates there are issues regarding sexual misconduct in Universities that are not being addressed (National Sexual Violence Resource Center, 2015).

There is a lack of research regarding education programs to prevent sexual misconduct as most research instead focuses on the misconduct itself. Even the limited research regarding the education programs rarely looks at the effect on victimization rates and instead focuses on behavior and attitudes following the implementation of the programs (Rothman & Silverman, 2007). Even within that area, the little research that exists focuses on changing men's outcomes instead of focusing exclusively on women's outcomes (Bannon & Foubert, 2017).

A number of universities have taken the initiative to work towards addressing these issues by using third party systems to education students, staff, and faculty. One system, CampusClarity by EVERFI, currently provides 186 universities the tools to assess and support sexual misconduct prevention efforts. EVERFI claims these tools are "comprehensive, research based assessments designed to identify prevention strengths, uncover opportunities for improvement, and benchmark efforts against leading institutions and organizations nationwide. The powerful benchmarking analysis gleaned from these inventories will support members in making breakthrough progress in prevention." (Everfi, 2018). While research exists representing attitudes and behaviors associated with this system, there is no research to show whether the use of this systems actually reduces the number of sexual misconduct events on participating campuses.

Purpose of the Study

The purpose of this study was to determine if the use of CampusClarity by EVERFI's system actually reduces the rate of reported cases of sexual assault and risky behavior in participating campuses as compared to universities that do not utilize their program. As stated on their website, they provide a "Program to reduce risky student behavior and prevent sexual assault on your campus” (CampusClarity by EVERFI, 2018). The 186 universities that are partnered with CampusClarity by EVERFI represents the treatment group of this study. The universities that do not utilize their program represents the control group. Results from university reporting required by the Clery Act were used as the instrument of this study.

Research Questions

This study focuses on the following general questions, with information gathered and organized through reports for the Clery Act:

1. Is there a significant difference in the 2017 data gathered through Clery Reports by university campuses that are partnered with CampusClarity by EVERFI and those that do not utilize their tools in regards to rape?
2. Is there a significant difference in the 2017 data gathered through Clery Reports by university campuses that are partnered with CampusClarity by EVERFI and those that do not utilize their tools in regards to stalking?

Limitations

This study was completed under the assumption that the universities listed by CampusClarity accurately reflect the actual list of universities that use their tools and that all universities utilize the tools equally. Their data is updated constantly. The data sets used in this study were obtained from the Campus Safety and Security Database, which is sponsored and maintained by the U.S. Department of Education, lending high reliability to this study. The categories selected were based off the categorization of this data, so conclusions outside of these categories cannot be obtained from the study. The data sets were aggregated from reported instances from universities that receive Title IX funding, and are heavily fined for misrepresenting their data, meaning this this data can be assumed to be a truthful representation of campus criminality reports. Title IX is a civil rights law with the purpose of ending discrimination on the basis of gender, including sexual violence, in educational institutions (Clery Center for Security on Campus, 2018).

Definitions of Terms

Because each state has some freedom in how they might define these terms definitions were selected that match national standards from the U.S. Department of Education and professions.

Campus: “Any building or property owned or controlled by the institution of higher education within the same reasonably contiguous geographic area or used by the institution in direct support of, or related to its educational purposes; or any building or property owned or controlled by student organizations recognized by the institution” (Kaplin & Lee, 2014) (Fisher, Reynolds, & Sloan III, 2015).

Clery Act: “The Clery Act requires colleges and universities to report campus crime data, support victims of violence, and publicly outline the policies and procedures they have put into place to improve campus safety.” (Clery Center for Security on Campus, 2018)

Dating Violence: “Violence committed by a person who is or has been in a social relationship of a romantic or intimate nature with the victim. The existence of such a relationship shall be determined based on the reporting party’s statement and with consideration of the length of the relationship, the type of relationship, and the frequency of interaction between the persons involved in the relationship. For the purposes of this definition-

- Dating violence includes, but is not limited to, sexual or physical abuse or the treat of such abuse.
- Dating violence does not include acts covered under the definition of domestic violence” (U.S. Department of Education, 2018)

Domestic Violence: “A felony or misdemeanor crime of violence committed-

- By a current or former spouse or intimate part of the victim;
- By a person with whom the victim shares a child in common;
- By a person who is cohabitating with or has cohabitated with, the victim as a spouse or intimate partner;
- By a person similarly situated to a spouse of the victim under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction in which the crime of violence occurred, or by any other person against an adult or youth victim who is protected from that person’s acts under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction in which the crime of violence occurred.” (U.S. Department of Education, 2018)

Fondling: “The touching of the private body parts of another person for the purpose of sexual gratification, without the consent of the victim, including instances where the victim is incapable of giving consent because of his/her age or because of his/her temporary or permanent mental incapacity.” (U.S. Department of Education, 2018)

Implied: “The word is used in law to contrast to “express”; i.e. where the intention in regard to the subject matter is not manifested by explicit and direct words, but is gathered by implication or necessary deduction from the circumstances, the general language, or the conduct of the parties” (Garner, 2014).

Rape: “The penetration, no matter how slight, of the vagina or anus, with any body part or object, or oral penetration by a sex organ of another person, without the consent of the victim.” (U.S. Department of Education, 2018)

Sexual Misconduct: “A lay term, sometimes used in institutional policies or by professional bodies. It covers an array of problematic sexual behavior including sexual harassment, sexual assault, and sexual abuse.” (Craig, 2018). For the purposes of this research ‘Sexual misconduct’ will be an all-inclusive term that includes the categories set by the Clery Act and the Violence Against Women Act; including sexual violence, domestic violence, dating violence, and stalking.

Sexual Violence: “A form of sexual harassment. Sexual violence refers to physical sexual acts perpetrated against a person’s will or where a person is incapable of giving consent (e.g., due to the student’s age or use of drugs or alcohol or an intellectual or other disability that prevents the student have having the capacity to give consent). Sexual violence includes rape, sexual assault, sexual battery, sexual abuse, and sexual coercion.” (White House Task Force to Protect Students from Sexual Assault, 2014). From the Clery reports this includes data from Rape and Fondling, since incest and statutory rape are outside the content of EVERFI’s program.

Stalking: “Engaging in a course of conduct directed at a specific person that would cause a reasonable person to-

- Fear for the person’s safety or the safety of others; or
- Suffer substantial emotional distress.” (U.S. Department of Education, 2018)

Title IV: A section of the Higher Education Act of 1965 that established the foundation for federal student aid in higher education. (Pusser & Wolcott, 2006)

Title IX: “A civil rights law that sought to end discrimination on the basis of gender in educational institutions. This includes sexual violence on college and university campuses.”

(Clery Center for Security on Campus, 2018)

Violence against Women Act: “The Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) amendments to the Clery Act expand the rights afforded to campus survivors of sexual assault, domestic violence, dating violence, and stalking. It also details the role of law enforcement, the types of crimes mandated for reporting, and stipulates the need for violence prevention programming.”

(Clery Center for Security on Campus, 2018).

CHAPTER 2

LITERATURE REVIEW

In this chapter, research related to educational-treatment through digital media and education regarding sexual misconduct and the use of information from the Clery Report is identified.

History of Sexual Misconduct Prevention Research

Although there are a variety of sexual assault prevention programs there is very little information regarding the effects of these programs on sexual assault victimization rates. Current research on the subject tends to correlate information on participation to behavior and learning objectives in a short term setting, but often do not utilize data on victimization rates (Rothman & Silverman, 2007). This lack of research has caused progress regarding the development of sexual assault prevention programs to be slow (Yeater & O'Donohue, 1999).

Bystander Intervention Program Effectiveness

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommends universities utilize bystander intervention programs for educational purposes to reduce sexual misconduct. A bystander intervention program teaches students to recognize sexual misconduct and violent behaviors and approaches to stop those behaviors. This program has become popular for university use due to its effectiveness (Banyard, Moynihan, & Plante, 2007) (Berkowitz, 2002)

(Foubert & Cowell, 2004) (Foubert & Perry, 2007). However, the effectiveness of this program style is also tied to reinforcement. For example, the CDC acknowledges that freshman educational programs can be effective but are only temporarily so. The CDC recommends universities provide constant education, training, and media so these behaviors are periodically reinforced, as programs that only introduce concepts show limited effectiveness. The report gives an example of how a program administered to incoming freshman students is not effective for more than a year without reinforcement (DeGue, 2014).

Behavior Modification through Posters

Because the media is shown to inspire attitudes towards sexual misconduct and myth acceptance (Dill, Brown, & Collins, 2008) (Dill, 2009) some universities have begun using posters to influence behaviors and attitudes with some effectiveness in many regards (Banyard, Moynihan, & Plante, 2007) (Brown & Messman-Moore, 2010) (Katz, Olin, Herman, & DuBois, 2013) (McMahon, 2010) (Potter, Moynihan, Stapleton, & Banyard, 2009) (Potter, Moynihan, & Stapleton, 2011). A poster campaign is a social norming campaign that seeks to “use perceptions of peer norms to influence behavior norms” (Katz, Olin, Herman, & DuBois, 2013) (Potter, Moynihan, & Stapleton, 2011). When specifically looking at campus culture research shows that a poster campaign can be successful in changing culture (Potter, Moynihan, Stapleton, & Banyard, 2009), which may be an indicator towards the success in the programs with a reduction of rape myth acceptance (Edwards, Turchik, Dardis, Reynolds, & Gidycz, 2011).

The Men’s Program

“The Men’s Program”, developed by Foubert (2005), is a seminar targeting college-aged men, approximately 18-24 years old, that tells the story of a male police officer whom two heterosexual males raped. The program shows positive results in destroying rape myths and especially affecting men who are at a high risk of becoming an offender, such as student-athletes and fraternity members (Banyard, Moynihan, & Plante, 2007). By showing rape as an act of violence that can even occur to men in a position of power, the program creates empathy in the participants towards female survivors and victims (Foubert & Cowell, 2004). The program reports participants in the program will display positive results for an academic year (Anderson & Whiston, 2005).

The program intends to work by sharing a story and starting a dialog for a chance for men to help their friends and acquaintances that have been sexually assaulted. The program does not use training videos that are partnered with testimonies from female survivors, a common tactic for sexual assault prevention programs, as a study show that these programs may actually arouse the men in attendance (Yeater & O'Donohue, 1999). The program also demonstrates how these programs can be more effective in small, closed groups, where the participants feel more comfortable opening up about these issues without feelings of judgement and criticism. This is especially true of men when the participation group does not comprise of any women (Foubert, Tatum, & Godin, 2010).

The MVP (Mentors in Violence Prevention) Program

The Mentors in Violence Prevention (MVP) program was developed at the Northeastern University's Center for the Study of Sport in Society by Dr. Jackson Katz in 1993 (Katz J. , 1995). The program works by reframing sexual misconduct from a "women's issue" to one where men can take an active role in prevention strategies. Like "The Men's Program", the participants are given a bystander view, rather than one as the victim or perpetrator. The program emphasizes bystander importance by demonstrating how to identify these issues and discussing intervention strategies. In their non-fictional scenarios, which demonstrate men and women as perpetrators, discussions follow how a bystander can be empowered to intervene, confront abusive peers, and support victims.

By discussing these scenarios and intervention techniques bystanders may learn that there are more than the two options typically given in these scenarios; those being to physically intervene and risk personal harm to themselves, or to do nothing. Bystanders with this knowledge and options are much more likely to intervene instead of remaining silent and complicit in this misconduct. These discussions often parallel to discussions about sexuality, gender, conformist options, and abuse of power. In single gender sessions, these groups will often pose further questions, as to why some people might seek to control their partners, why some people perpetuate sexual assault, and how cultural definitions of masculinity and femininity might contribute to violent behaviors and victimization. The results show an effectiveness in the program by creating empathy for victims by depicting sexual misconduct as violence instead of a deviant sex act, normalizing and perpetuating the behavior (Foubert & Newberry, 2006) (Schewe, 2002).

Treatment through a Digital Medium

In an increasingly digital age new opportunities for education and treatment have become available. Innovation through delivery of information is nothing new, but with increased reliance on the internet more people, especially younger generations (Brenner, 2013), have expressed interest in gaining information digitally (Bull, Levine, Black, Schmiede, & Santelli, 2012) (Guse, et al., 2012). This also includes opportunities for intervention regarding sexual health (Guse, et al., 2012) (Webb, Joseph, Yardley, & Michie, 2010). This is especially effective regarding at-risk youth who require more engagement (Gold, et al., 2011) (Guse, et al., 2012) (Selkie, Benson, & Moreno, 2011).

Mamie Louise Evers (2001) studied the effect of online implementation program to prevent substance abuse in youths. The program, SubstanceAbusePrevention.org was integrated with the traditional youth drug prevention program, the Boys and Girls Club Stay SMART. The results of the study indicate that the online program was just as effective as the traditional program.

Trudeau, Black, Kamon, and Sussman (2017) conducted a study regarding a drug relapse prevention program for adolescents. One group was given an online treatment program, Navigating My Journey (NmJ) and the other group was given wellness articles from the Nemours Foundation to read at their discretion. Data was collected at the start of the experiment and included a 1-month, a 3-month, and a 6-month follow up. A linear mixed modeling approach showed adolescents participating in the online program not only showed greater motivation at the 3-month and the 6-month follow up but showed reduce drug use at the 3-month follow up when compared to the control group, indicating online programs could possibly be used as a treatment option for behavioral modification.

Kernsmith and Kernsmith (2008) studied the efficacy of an online support group for recovering sex offenders. The support group, facilitated by two nonprofessional, recovering sex offenders, showed positive outcomes for all voluntary participants. These participants found the online environment to be therapeutic, resulting in positive support and confrontation through their process. Using a t-test, these participants also showed significant improvement in several indicators such as remorse, empathy, and behavior recognition in comparison to non-participants.

Analysis of victimization rates

In 2007 Emily Rothman and Jay Silverman published results of a U.S. Department of Education funded study where they analyzed the effects of workshop-style intervention on sexual assault victimization rates in a Northeastern University. This study was unique because it is one of the few studies related to sexual misconduct prevention that actually looks at victimization rates and not behavioral changes. The team developed a 2-pronged educational program. The program consisted of a 90-minute drama presentation and a 90-minute small group workshop. The drama presentation named “Sex Signals” is a 2-person show produced by Midwestern Drama Company. The show has been performed more than 3,500 times at colleges and universities in the United States with over 1 million students in attendance since its creation (Catharsis Productions, 2018). The show combines elements of audience involvement and comedy to educate female and male students about gender stereotypes, rape myth acceptance, and sexual assault awareness. The workshop consisted of 10 to 20 students a 90-minute conversation including discussion of various definitions, consequences for perpetrators, statistics, methods of risk reduction, bystander intervention, communication tips.

The study included a control group of 744 students and a treatment group of 1,244 students. A multiple regression analysis with a 95% confidence interval was used to determine differences between the two groups. Controlling for differences in gender rate and substance abuse the control group had 1.74 times the odds of reporting sexual assault during their Freshman year than the treatment group. The results suggest effectiveness for students who identified as male and female. Students who identified as gay, lesbian, and bisexual showed an increase chance of risk when compared to heterosexual students or students who admitted to substance abuse. The program did not show any effectiveness for students who reported a history of sexual abuse victimization, which traditionally will continue to be victimized. The reason for this is unclear but could possibly be because individuals who become survivors lack poor sexual risk recognition skills, possibly as a function of their limited cognitive process or because of a trauma disorder. There is also a possibility that the survivors' increased vulnerability is somehow observable by culprits, who then target those survivors more often (VanZile-Tamsen, Testa, & Livingston, 2005) (Rich, Gidycz, Warkentin, Loh, & Weiland, 2005). It is possible these risks could be alleviated by more intensive education and training for survivors. For example, the training could take place one on one or with greater frequency (Rothman & Silverman, 2007).

Variables Associated with Victimization

There are many predictors of sexual misconduct that can be used to predict victimization rates. A study by Sheridan and Evans (2019) analyzed chart information on emergency room visits for sexual assault among a college-age population. Results of the study showed most patients were female (98%) and 70% of the patients were younger than 21 years of age. Among those that were younger than 21, 74% reported alcohol use at the time of their assault. The authors determined that increased alcohol use leads to increased victimization and this information should be included when designing risk reduction educational strategies.

Gilmore, Bountress, Selmanoff, and George (2018) created a web-based intervention program that attempted to reduce combined alcohol use and sexual assault risk reduction. The study examined the effect of heavy episodic drinking, alcohol-induced blackouts, and incapacitation on sexual assault severity. The 264 women participated with half introduced to the combined program and half introduced to only the received sexual assault reduced program. The sexual assault risk reduction content reduced alcohol-induced blackouts and incapacitation and the combined program only reduced incidences of blackouts. Results of the study only demonstrated reduced sexual assault severity in participants that reported incapacitation, with no effect on participants that drank heavily or blacked-out.

Even perceptions about alcohol use may be a predictor of victimization. Boyle (2017) studied how perceptions and expectations regarding alcohol influence intervention in men (n=60) and women (n=160) to surprising results. When accounting for sociability and sexuality and sexual appetite Boyle discovered that positive perceptions and expectations regarding alcohol could actually promote bystander intervention and reduce victimization. In men, higher perceptions regarding alcohol (such as using alcohol as a social lubricant or to reduce stress and tension) or higher expectations regarding alcohol (such as feeling more outgoing, or better able to express feelings, or being friendlier) correlated to being more likely to intervene when witnessing assault scenarios. This was especially true in situations that allowed them to feel masculine, such as a public social setting. In women, lower expectations regarding alcohol (such as feeling guilty about drinking or feeling moody and self-critical) were correlated as being less likely to intervene. While this difference in results between sexes can somewhat be identified by gender roles, more research on the topic is needed, as risk-reduction programs may be able to use this information to better tailor academic curriculum to cater towards better outcomes for men and women.

According to Lawyer, Resnick, Bakanic, Burkett, & Kilpatrick (2010) drugs are also an issue concerning sexual misconduct. A sample of 314 college-student females reported experiences with forcible and drug-related sexual assault in a single Spring 2004 semester. Of those surveyed, 29.6% of the respondents reported a drug-related sexual assault or rape and 5.4% reported experiencing forcible sexual violence. Of those that reported drug-related assault, 84.6% of the incapacitations were voluntary, whereas 15.4% of the assaults involved involuntary incapacitation. 96.1% of drug-related assaults involved alcohol assumption prior to the assault, another major determining factor. The authors concluded that drug-related assaults on college campuses are more frequent than forcible assaults and most frequently include alcohol consumption.

Another study by Hindmarch, ElSohly, Gambles, and Salamone (2001) studied 3303 analyses of urine samples collected by sexual assault victims that believed drugs were involved. This study allowed the researchers to measure which drugs were most commonly used. Of those samples, 2026 (61.3%) tested positive for one or more substances. Alcohol was the most common substance (67% of positives), and followed by cannabis (30.3% of positives). The myth of the typical 'date rape' scenario where a victim's drink is secretly spiked with some chemical was not supported by this research.

METHODOLOGY

The purpose of this research was to examine trends related to specific Title IX violations and to determine if the systems provided by CampusClarity by EVERFI showed any significantly different trends related to sexual assault (rape), and risky behavior (stalking). The goal of this research was to establish an empirical basis for whether this system showed any effects on reporting that is included in the Clery Act. This chapter addresses the design and methodology of this study.

Because there is no literature that examines this program, a null hypothesis is utilized with the analysis following a study by Rothman and Silverman (2007) which measured the victimization rates of university students in a sexual assault prevention program and victimization rates of university students who did not complete the program. The study used student population, substance abuse, sexual orientation, and sexual victimization. This study does not include sexual orientation because results for that categorization were inconclusive and sexual victimization because data on that factor is not recorded by universities.

H<sub>0</sub>1: There is no significant change in Clery report data in 2017 for university campuses that are partnered with CampusClarity by EVERFI and those that do not utilize their tools in regards to rape.

H<sub>0</sub>2: There is no significant change in Clery report data in 2017 for university campuses that are partnered with CampusClarity by EVERFI and those that do not utilize their tools in regards to stalking.

Population and Sample

The population consists of the 11,181 campuses that receive Title IV funding and are required to report their crime statistics to abide by the Clery Act. Of this population, the campuses were separated by the 186 universities that are partnered with the CampusClarity by EVERFI and the universities that do not use their systems.

Variables and Instrumentation

The variables used in this study include independent categorical data on whether or not the CampusClarity by EVERFI systems were used, independent variables on campus enrollment, and dependent variables on the number of sexual misconducts reported by the Clery Act. The dependent variables were calculated by totaling the populations and number of incidents and then averaging to the number of incidents per 1000 students so campuses with a smaller population were not weighted equivalently with campuses that had a larger population.

Data on enrollment and sexual misconduct are publicly supplied by the Clery Act reports. The information is due October 1st of every year (Clery Center for Security on Campus, 2018). Information on CampusClarity by EVERFI partners is provided by EVERFI (Everfi, 2018a).

Data Analysis

In the existing body of literature there is a combination of studies utilizing T-tests and regression analysis in this field of study. While studies that focus on raising awareness around sexual harassment often involve T-tests, studies that use victimization data tend to use a multiple regression analysis, since there are many indicators involving sexual misconduct rates. Because of this information, a multiple regression analysis was utilized for data analysis.

1. Is there a significant difference in the 2017 data gathered through Clery Reports by university campuses that are partnered with CampusClarity by EVERFI and those that do not utilize their tools in regards to rape?

A multiple-regression analysis was used to determine if there was a significant difference between university campuses that are partnered with CampusClarity by EVERFI and those that do not utilize their tools in regards to rape when taking into account student population of men, student population of women, drug arrests, and liquor arrests.

2. Is there a significant difference in the 2017 data gathered through Clery Reports by university campuses that are partnered with CampusClarity by EVERFI and those that do not utilize their tools in regards to stalking?

A multiple-regression analysis was used to determine if there was a significant difference between university campuses that are partnered with CampusClarity by EVERFI and those that do not utilize their tools in regards to stalking when taking into account student population of men, student population of women, drug arrests, and liquor arrests.

Internal Validity

The study involves a quantitative research design to determine trends in university sexual misconduct and the effects of utilizing CampusClarity by EVERFI's systems. The data collected is publicly available information. The statistical tools selected were multiple regression to incorporate independent variables of male population, female population, drug arrests, and alcohol arrests. Normality was determined between the relationships of the independent and dependent variables.

External Validity

There are no concerns of external validity with this study since the population is being used as the sample, meaning all universities required to comply with the Clery Act are being considered in the analysis.

Summary

This chapter presents the goal of the research and the design used. The population used for this study consists of all universities that accept Title IV funding. The population was then then separated into a control group, the universities that do not use CampusClarity by EVERFI systems, and a treatment group, the universities that do use CampusClarity by EVERFI systems. Data gathered and publicly made available by the Clery Act was used to evaluate these comparisons. Multiple regression analysis techniques was utilized to determine the results of this study.

DATA ANALYSIS

The purpose of this study was to determine if the campuses that are partnered with CampusClarity by EVERFI see lower rates of stalking and rape. The original analysis looked at the results taking into consideration the number of men and women at the college, their partner status, and drug and alcohol crime data for campuses. Following the results of that study, another analysis was utilized to include domestic and dating violence from the Violence Against Women section of the Clery Reports, seeking a correlation between domestic and dating violence on campuses as further predictors of rape and stalking. The research questions and hypothesis introduced in earlier chapters guided this study.

The responses from the 2017 Clery Act reported 11,181 public and private campuses that completed the requirements. 186 organizations partnered with CampusClarity by EVERFI were documented as of 4/16/2019 (CampusClarity by EVERFI, 2018). Some issues in reporting were identified during the study. The Clery Act does not include results from military academies, which are exempt from Title IX and the Clery Act, resulting in one less pledge partner that could not be documented. Some universities and campuses were listed multiple times, such as the University of Cincinnati. Other universities were also listed, along with some of their related campuses independently, which misrepresents the actual number of pledged partners. The data used in this study does not reflect duplicate information provided from EVERFI as duplicated data was controlled by removal prior to the analysis. Non-institutional organizations, such as fraternities, also utilize the CampusClarity by EVERFI program. Information on these organizations was not included as it does not involve the focus of this study.

Information from the Clery Act is publicly available online through the Campus Safety and Security database. The 2018 report included information reported in 2017. The data for on-campus crime was the main source of information, along with data on partners being manually inputted and information from the on-campus violence against women act file were included into the study.

Based on the information in the study a linear regression analysis was completed to determine correlation between the dependent variable, campus data on rape and stalking, and the independent variable of partnership.

The following information was gathered for the first analysis regarding rape:

a. Dependent Variable: RAPE17

Table 1, the model summary for the first analysis involving rape shows an R Squared value of .292, meaning the model presented represents 29.2% of the data involved in the study.

Table 2, the coefficients summary for the first analysis involving rape shows a positive B coefficient of 1.084 for campuses that are partnered with CampusClarity by EVERFI. This demonstrates a positive correlation between program use and reported incidences of rape on college campuses. A measured significance for partnership of 0.000 is less than 0.05, demonstrating statistically significant data.

Because of the low R Squared value from the first analysis a second analysis was completed to include data on domestic violence and dating violence. Along with information on stalking and sexual assault, this means all information on the Violence Against Women Act is included in the analysis.

The following information was gathered for the second analysis regarding rape:

Table 3, the model summary for the second analysis involving rape shows an R Squared value of .668, meaning the model presented represents 66.8% of the data involved in the study.

Table 4, the coefficients summary for the second analysis involving rape shows a positive B coefficient of 0.509 for campuses that are partnered with CampusClarity by EVERFI. This demonstrates a positive correlation between program use and reported incidences of rape on college campuses. A measured significance for partnership of 0.000 is less than 0.05, demonstrating statistically significant data.

The following information was gathered for the first analysis regarding stalking:

Findings

Research Question 1: Is there a significant difference in the 2017 data gathered through Clery Reports by university campuses that are partnered with CampusClarity by EVERFI and those that do not utilize their tools in regards to rape?

H<sub>0</sub>1: There is no significant change in Clery report data in 2017 for university campuses that are partnered with CampusClarity by EVERFI and those that do not utilize their tools in regards to rape.

The dependent variable, number of reported incidences of rapes per college campus in 2017, was used in a linear regression analysis with the variables: Partnership, Men's Enrollment, Women's Enrollment, Drug Crime, and Alcohol Crime, as shown in Table 2. Table 1 shows the model has an R Square value of .292. When looking at the coefficient data in Table 2, a coefficient for partnership is realized as  $B = 1.084$  with a Significance of 0.000.

This data shows a statistically significant increase in rape for universities that are partners. A significance value of 0.000 is less than 0.05 so the null hypothesis is rejected.

The second analysis included the variables for domestic violence and dating violence as additional predictors of rape. This resulted in an R Square value of 0.668, as shown in Table 5. This also changed the correlation of Partnership as an independent variable by changing to  $B = 0.509$  and a Significance of 0.000, as shown in Table 6.

While this second analysis represents a better fit model for the data as represented with a higher R Square value, the lower B value for Partnership shows a lower predictor, but still a statistically significant increase in incidences of rape for universities that are partnered, meaning the Null Hypothesis is still rejected.

Research Question 2: Is there a significant difference in the 2017 data gathered through Clery Reports by university campuses that are partnered with CampusClarity by EVERFI and those that do not utilize their tools in regards to stalking?

H<sub>0</sub>2: There is no significant change in Clery report data in 2017 for university campuses that are partnered with CampusClarity by EVERFI and those that do not utilize their tools in regards to stalking.

The dependent variable, number of reported incidences of stalking per college campus in 2017, was used in a linear regression analysis with the variables: Partnership, Men's Enrollment, Women's Enrollment, Drug Crime, and Alcohol Crime, as shown in Table 4. Table 3 shows the model has an R Square value of .226. When looking at the coefficient data in Table 4, a coefficient for partnership is realized as  $B = 0.724$  with a Significance of 0.000.

This data shows a statistically significant increase in stalking for universities that are partners. A significance value of 0.000 is less than 0.05 so the null hypothesis is rejected.

The second analysis included the variables for domestic violence and dating violence as additional predictors of stalking. This resulted in an R Square value of 0.505, as shown in Table 7. This also changed the correlation of Partnership as an independent variable by changing to  $B = 0.214$  and a Significance of 0.028, as shown in Table 8.

While this second analysis represents a better fit model for the data as represented with a higher R Square value, the lower B value for Partnership shows a lower predictor, but still a statistically significant increase in incidences of stalking for universities that are partnered, meaning the Null Hypothesis is still rejected.

Summary

The purpose of this study was to determine if the campuses that are partnered with CampusClarity by EVERFI see lower rates of stalking and rape. Data from the 11,181 campuses reporting to the Clery Act and information on which campuses were partnered with EVERFI were utilized for this study. The original analysis looked at the results taking into consideration the number of men and women at the college, their partner status, and drug and alcohol crime data for campuses. Following the results of that study, another analysis was utilized to include domestic and dating violence from the Violence Against Women section of the Clery Reports, seeking a correlation between domestic and dating violence on campuses as further predictors of rape and stalking.

A statistically significant positive relationship was found between partnership and the number of incidences of stalking and rape on campuses. After the second analysis, a statistically significant positive relationship was still found between partnership and the number of incidences of stalking and rape on campuses, although to a lesser extent. This resulted in a rejection of the null hypothesis for each independent variable in all analyses.

OVERVIEW

This study examined a relationship between the number of reported incidences of stalking and rape on college campuses and campuses that are partnered with EVERFI, meaning tools from CampusClarity by EVERFI's programs are provided. The goal of this study was to establish if there was an empirical basis for any change in the number of reported incidences between universities that are partnered with EVERFI and those that are not. This chapter provides a summary of the results, limitations, and recommendations for further consideration and research.

Discussion of Findings

The purpose of this study was to identify if a correlation existed between partnership with EVERFI and the number of reported incidences of rape and stalking on campuses. Findings from this study add to the ongoing literature related to college sexual assault, sexual assault prevention, and sexual assault related education. The following questions were developed and statistically analyzed using a linear regression model to determine if a correlation existed.

Research Question 1: Is there a significant difference in the 2017 data gathered through Clery Reports by university campuses that are partnered with CampusClarity by EVERFI and those that do not utilize their tools in regards to rape? Yes, a correlation was found between the dependent variable, the number of reported rapes on campuses, and the independent variable, partnership with EVERFI. A significance  $< 0.05$  rejects the null hypothesis that there is no statistically significant relationship between the number of reported incidences of rape and partnership with EVERFI. The positive B value shows that universities that are partnered with EVERFI have more reported incidences of rape than universities that are not partnered.

Research Question 2: Is there a significant difference in the 2017 data gathered through Clery Reports by university campuses that are partnered with CampusClarity by EVERFI and those that do not utilize their tools in regards to stalking? Yes, a correlation was found between the dependent variable, the number of reported cases of stalking on campuses, and the independent variable, partnership with EVERFI. A significance  $< 0.05$  rejects the null hypothesis that there is no statistically significant relationship between the number of reported incidences of stalking and partnership with EVERFI. The positive B value shows that universities that are partnered with EVERFI have more reported incidences of stalking than universities that are not partnered.

With every study there are going to be limitations and this study is not exempt from that. While the ability to include statistical data from every university is an amazing opportunity, there is no guarantee that the responses of data from universities is accurate. In fact, many incidences of sexual assault go unreported; meaning any study of this data is incomplete. Differences in definitions may also change how victims view themselves and how likely they are to report offenses.

This study was also unable to take into consideration many factors that may also affect sexual assault and negative behavior rates, such as the general crime in the campus areas, general sexuality of the population, or the previous sexual history of students; information which is not available or generally gathered by universities.

It is also possible that there are inconsistent results from universities that are partnered because of different practices. Some universities implement a mandatory program periodically, while other universities do not show any requirement for students, faculty, or staff to complete the training, meaning that some populations may not ever be trained. EVERFI does not provide instructions publically, but instructions may be available privately, which still does not mean that universities are following the recommended prescription.

While the results of the study show that universities that are partnered with EVERFI have more reported incidences of stalking and rape, it is possible that this training does not actually increase the number of incidences, but instead influences students to report more events. By educating their population, campuses may actually be reducing the number of incidences of assault, making the campuses safer, but the increase in education means that more assaults are reported, leading to an incorrect assumption. It is also possible that introducing explicit content like this leads to more incidences of sexual assault by arousing participants (Yeater & O'Donohue, 1999).

The product available by EVERFI seems to follow the current trend of bystander intervention, which many current sexual assault prevention programs also utilize and recommend. The only exception seems to be that most programs recommend face-to-face, sex-separated communication about sexual assault instead of indirect digital learning methods, which may further reduce occurrences of assault on campuses.

Recommendations for Practice and Future Results

This study concluded that a statistically significant (significance < .05) correlation between partnership with EVERFI and reported incidences of rape and stalking. The fit of the model with the data (R Square = 0.668 for rape and R Square = 0.505 for stalking) shows that a better model could be introduced by taking into consideration more independent variables.

1. The introduction of quantitative variables that measure crime surrounding campuses could be used to explain the number of reported assaults. While all crime information used was for on-campus incidences, there is no method for determining how many of these incidences were influenced by persons that live off campus or are not even faculty, staff, or students at the campus.
2. A qualitative analysis could be conducted to determine if the proper implementation of this program has an effect on the dependent variables. Because information on implementation is not always publicly available, a qualitative analysis contacting persons at each campus regarding their training methods could provide more insight. Questions might relate to when the program is implemented, how it is implemented, and how often it is implemented.
3. The Clery Act was utilized because of its reliability and accessibility, but other dependent variables could be utilized. A questionnaire regarding safety of each university could be developed, or other information from the Clery Act could be included.
4. Information gathered for this analysis only included information for 2017. It is possible that these results have changed over time as institutions became partnered. A study showing historic variables of participating campuses could be utilized to see how assault outcomes have historically changed with partnership.

Summary

Sexual assault is a serious issue. Thanks to recent social movements and political influences, the issue has gotten more attention in recent years. The goal of this study was to establish if there was an empirical basis for any change in the number of reported incidences between universities that are partnered with EVERFI and those that are not. The study demonstrated a positive statistical significance between partnership with EVERFI's educational program, CampusClarity by EVERFI and the number of reported incidences of rape and stalking on campuses.

Limitations included the inability to gather certain data from universities, such as crime in the surrounding area, sexuality of populations, and sexual behavior of populations and differences in practices at partnered universities. More information on implementation may show how early or repeated implementation correlates to differences in the dependent variables.

While a positive correlation was discovered, it is possible that implementation of this program does not increase the number of assaults at partnered campuses. Increases in education and awareness may actually lead to less incidences of assault but more reports being submitted. Because many victims feel embarrassment and shame regarding their assault, it is impossible to obtain the exact number of assaults each at campuses each year. It is also possible that introducing explicit content like this leads to more incidences of sexual assault by arousing participants (Yeater & O'Donohue, 1999). The tools provided by EVERFI are mostly in-line with current trends following bystander-intervention as an education model, but the fact that implementation may not contain face-to-face conversations as recommended in the literature means the program may not be optimally utilized.

Conclusion

Based on the research presented, CampusClarity by EVERFI's claim to 'reduce risky student behavior and prevent sexual assault on your campus' (CampusClarity by EVERFI, 2018) is determined to be false, based on the increased likelihood of stalking and rape on college campuses that utilize the program. This claim is based on information provided by the US Department of Education compared with partnership data provided by EVERFI.

It is possible that the digital educational program could be improved with better delivery. Instructions on the implementation of the program from the developer could lead to better results. For example, implementation of the program early and with repetition could lead to better outcomes. Requirements that all students, staff, and faculty complete the program could also improve results as some universities indicate that not everybody is consuming the tool. The program could also benefit from the inclusion of face-to-face, gender-separated discussions, as is common with most sexual-assault prevention programs. While the program being provided entirely digitally may make the tool more attractive to campuses, the literature of sexual-assault prevention education is almost entirely based on face-to-face education which shows positive results, unlike this digital program. The inclusion of face-to-face delivery as complimentary to the main digital program may yield better results and is recommended to EVERFI and partnered campuses.
